Greater Kansas City
Ladies at the Bar
Nobody Licked
When the Cyclone Came Down

Kansas City, Mo., April 25—
Interesting day here in Kansas City, which as you know is Kansas City, Mo. The other Kansas City, across the state line, is in Kansas City, Kan. When this writer first knew it Kansas City was a different city. Mr. Corri-gan's one-mule street cars supplied the only transportation, unless you wanted to hire a two-horse "hack."

The one-mule cars ran between the two Kansas cities, which was convenient for inhabitants because in Kansas City, Mo., you could drink legally, but there was no convenient gambling. In Kansas City, Kan., there was plenty of gambling, faro especially, but no legal drinking.

This condition enriched Mr.
Corrigan, who went into horse-racing.
This is a great city now, second railroad center in the United States, with tall skyscrapers that would make the Tower of Babel look like a bungalow and astonish the Dickey brothers, with their fine large diamond studs and free money, if they could come back, driving their bunches of long-horn cattle up from Texas.

Much great surprises would fill those Dickey Brothers and old Colonel Coates, who ran the Coates House and the Coates
Opera House opposite the hotel, on the bluff overlooking the flats, if they could have seen in a beautiful, modern hotel "just like New York" charming young ladies, really "ladies" sitting on high stools at a semi-circular bar, singly, in pairs, or sometimes with a man, they feel on the brass rail.

That is the outgrowth, here as in New York, of the prohibition speakeasy. It is all right, the bartender in white shirt sleeves, "vest" of brilliant scarlet, assures you. "It is the thing with ladies."

Kansas City has a magnificent new five million dollar municipal auditorium and is building a new four million dollar city hall. It has four hundred thousand population, or six hundred thousand if you are willing to include Kansas City, Kan., and Lawrence, as New York drags in Brooklyn, Bronx, Staten Island, Long Island City.

What is more, Kansas City supports a philharmonic orchestra, now in its third and most successful season, planning double the number of concerts. Not many Eastern cities can do that.

The Kansas City Journal-Popular prints this column, drops around to ask, "What do you mean?" and says, "I don't know how it is in the East, but nobody out here is licked."

Nobody shows the slightest indication of being "licked."
This city grows big. It is a city of aggressive men. It was when it was young, and side-wheel boats came down the river to the landing, and occasionally, police officers would pursue some bad men up the street.
Judge Dobson's law office, shooting as they pursued. If the bad man succeeded in getting over the high wall, around Millennium clubhouse, he usually escaped. Peaceful citizens dived down basement stairs, not interested in the shooting.

When a cyclone came down the river and struck the sharp curve just above 16th street, and went on its way west, Miss Corbett Baker from St. Louis, perhaps the most beautiful girl in St.
Louis, except Miss Chouteau, or Miss Hazlett, went driving and galloping after the cyclone in a two-horse hack with a young man from New York. No danger. The cyclone never turns around.

From a small printing plant, when news was told, William Rockhill Nelson used to come up occasionally and get an interview on the future of Kansas City from the young man from New York who was supervising the construction of Kansas city's first six or seven-story brick building, at the corner of Delaware avenue and 6th street, for the late Albert Bryan, who deposited considerable sums in various Kansas City banks.
Linda, Delaware avenue, Ninth street, Wyandotte street.

The money is still coming in fortunately, making it necessary for the New York young man to work for a living.
Col. Nelson worked hard at the late Albert Bryan, and the result of his hard work and hard fighting in Kansas City was magnificent. Nelson in which his spirit, through his executors, still continues to invest that newspaper's large earnings.

What a fine thing to succeed in a useful calling, and then spend the earnings for the benefit of the city.

Atty. Scharon Must Pay U. S. $36,666

TO HOLD UP IN ROBBERY

U. S. ORDERS SCHARON TO PAY $36,666

William R. Scharon, prominent Boston attorney, must pay $36,666 in income taxes for 1926 and 1927, Charles P. Smith of the federal board of tax appeals ruled today.

The board ruling orders that Scharon, counsel for Abe Faber, condemned to die with the Miller brothers, pay a 50 per cent penalty.

It had been charged that Scharon owed the government more than $24,000 in back taxes.

Today's ruling was the result of an appeal taken by Scharon following a hearing last August before Bureau of Internal Revenue officials.

In the order of today it was charged that Scharon "fled false and fraudulent income tax returns for the years 1926 and 1927."

He was indicted for filing the allegedly false returns, but the indictment was not returned as a true bill from the date that the allegedly fraudulent returns were filed.

NO BAR TO PENALTY
Decisions were cited in today's report by the Tax Appeal Board, purporting to show that the quantum of the criminal prosecution was not a bar to the imposition of the "true bill" which imposes 50 per cent additional for failure to file a return within the time limit.

Special Agent John Glutcher of the Intelligence Unit in New York had prosecuted the investigation of Scharon in 1927 returned by Scharon.

Gang Victim Killed in 'Ride' Car

Wrentham, Mass., April 25—A man was found murdered in a car parked in the woods near Lake Pearl here today.

Apparently he was the victim of a "gunland" ride.
He had been dead several times. The body was on the floor of the rear of the car, a sedan.

The victim, unidentified for several hours after the finding, was about 30 years of age. He was well-dressed in checked suit and topcoat. There were Rhode Island plates on the car.

Police said they were registered to a Radnor, Maine, Green street, Providence.

Merola is at liberty on $2000 bonds on a charge of being an accessory after the fact of the 1926 holdup of a Providence mail train.

Merola and Victor DeMatteo, of Boston, were the only ones arrested. The latter was found guilty of armed robbery at the last session of Providence court.

The car was partly hidden off the road in what is known as more's woods, a short distance from the lake.

Police expressed the tentative opinion, pending identification, that the murder was the result of a Providence gang war.

3 SHOT, 2 DIE IN FILM LAND MYSTERY

Hollywood, April 26—Death stalked through Hollywood today, leaving in its wake two men dead and a third wounded probably fatally.

Victims in the baffling mystery, two of whom died immediately after the shooting:

Paul Wharton, 25-year-old Hollywood dress designer.

William Howard, about 35, an ex-navy ensign and chauffeur for the style creator.

Henry E. Bolle, 38, law instructor at University of California at Los Angeles, who, doctors fear, cannot survive.

Wharton, known professionally as Paul Ivar, who had fashioned clothes for several prominent screen actresses, was murdered last night—the tragic climax of an intimate supper in his Hollywood apartment-studio, according to police.

Howard, sought by police in connection with the shooting, was found dead, apparently a suicide, several hours later in an apartment building entrance block away.

Nearby was Bolle, lying critically wounded in front of his own apartment house.

Sharp Watch at Border

Metz, France, April 26—A sharp watch was kept along the Franco-German border today for German planes, reported to have flown over fortified regions at least four times recently in disregard of French protests.

Newspapers interpreted the announcement of the air ministry that "the government has taken locally all police measures judged necessary" to mean that in accordance with international regulations planes flying over the fortifications will be flagged down and their pilots requested to produce their papers.

ARMED PAIR AT FORT SEIZE PAY AND FLEE

Losing a brief hand-to-hand battle with two armed bandits, Harry E. Gibby of Holland road, Brookline, was robbed of a $1780 payroll today in front of the plants of the Mechanic Iron Foundry Company and the Mechanics' Machine Company, Roxbury.

Gibby, treasurer of both concerns, had just returned from the National Rockland Bank at Dudley and Washington street, and had parked his car.

As he stepped from the machine, two men confronted him. Each had a nickel plated revolver. Gibby, however, he was the only one who was not a "dude" one of the bandits replied.

"I haven't any money," he was told. "We know all about your place."
Before Gibby could answer, he was seized by the throat. The bandits struggled, but the bandit took from him the canvas bag in which was the payroll. They missed, however, $200 additional which he had in a trousers pocket.

The brief contest was over almost as soon as it began, Gibby said, and then the bandits ran across Kennebec street, jumped into a dark green sedan and sped away in the direction of Washington and Washington street, Roxbury.

Gibby took down the number and ran into the companies' offices to telephone police. A short time later the sedan, bearing license plates reported stolen in the Rockland Bank a month ago, was found abandoned at Washington and East street, Roxbury.

According to the treasurer, a third man had remained at the wheel of the bandit car, which apparently had followed him from the bank.

The holdup victim described one of the bandits as about 25 years old, five feet six inches tall, very thin and wearing a light topcoat. The second bandit was about the same size, four inches or more taller, wore dark glasses but had no topcoat.

2 SLAIN, 1 DYING IN WEIRD HOLLYWOOD MYSTERY

WIFE'S DRESS DESIGNER VICTIM

As C. M. McDermott was the third person in the room at the time Wharton was slain, "Cloud said, 'We believe he was not involved in the shootings, but other officers now are looking for him in the belief he can clear up minor details.'

Cloud said McDermott leaped from Wharton's apartment after three shots had been fired. The deputy said the man's fall was broken by a chair, and investigators later found a brown hat and a piece of white shirt.

From Mrs. W. A. Wharton, the dress designer's invalid foster mother, Detective Lieutenant R. L. Berry learned that he had entertained two or possibly three male acquaintances last night at a supper in his part of their quarters.

Just before 10 o'clock Mrs. Wharton said she heard several shots, and crawling into the next room found Wharton dying.

His erstwhile guests, one of whom she knew only as "Billy," had fled. As she knelt over his body, Mrs. Wharton said, another man whom she never saw before, hurriedly ran out.

Detectives summoned by startled neighbors began an investigation of the murder—and were baffled when a call sent them dashing to the apartment house occupied by Billy.

WIFE SEES SHOOTING

There they found the instructor, wounded in the back and each lying just outside his door, and a few feet away was Howard, dead.

Bolte said he had never seen Howard before, but his wife, Virginia, identified a picture of him as a former friend of the family and a frequent visitor up to five months ago in their home.

The instructor, who said he had attended a law banquet downtown last night, said he was unlocking his door when he heard several shots. He fell to the floor shot in the back as another pistol report rang out.

Mrs. Bolte told Lieutenant Berry she had gone to the door to admit her husband when the shooting occurred, and he slumped at her feet. She said she saw Howard step toward the front door and stop. She said he placed a pistol in the temple and fired.

Bolte told the officers he had seen the man outside as he drove up in front of his home with Mr. and Mrs. Karl Schlichter, but paid no attention to him.

"I never saw him before," Bolte said as officers turned him so he could look at Howard's body. Bolte is an instructor of law in the emergency educational program sponsored by the U. S. L. The Bolte couple have two small children.

By a peculiar coincidence, the Bolte apartment number was the same as the slain actress's.

CRAWLS TO SCENE

Wharton's foster mother, a bookish, paralytic victim, said she heard Paul and his dinner guests quarrel after they dined. Then, she said, she heard them quarrel and a moment later several shots rang out.

Crawling from her bed, she managed to reach the room where her adopted son lurched to the floor. He died a moment later.

There were three bullets in his body.

An ironic note was injected into the story with the finding of two apes. Wharton apparently had been reading before the arrival of her guests. Both of them were stories and one bore the title, "The Second Shift."

Mrs. Wharton said a third man came into the room just as Paul was crawling on all fours and promptly disappeared.

She said she had never seen him before. Mrs. Wharton said Paul had designed clothes for Jean Harlow, Constance Bennett and Mrs. Amy Semple McPherson. From police investigation it appeared that his career as a fashion maker had been on the wane at least in recent months.

Mrs. Wharton said Paul was adopted originally by William C. Billings, Mort, but came here a year later. The first time he came an attendant at Evangelist McPherson's Angelus Temple, and it was there that he first met her. Later she adopted him and brought him to her home to live.

SENATE REVOTES School Flag Bill

On a roll call vote, the Senate yesterday reconsidered its action of yesterday and put through for a third reading the bill requiring schoolhouses to display the American flag and requiring teachers and pupils to take the pledge of allegiance each day.

Yesterday the Senate rejected the bill, to which Senator Henry Parkman of Boston had added an amendment requiring that teachers and pupils also recite the Lord's Prayer each school day.

STATIC SOLVED

New York, April 26 (INS)—No more static.

After much experiment, the cause of radio finally has been eliminated by Major Edwin H. Armstrong, president of electrical engineering at Columbia University, he made known today.

Film Stars Aghast! Who'll Dress 'Em Now?

Thrown out of jobs by the closing of the Pequot Mills, hundreds stormed Salem ERA offices today as Mayor George J. Bates demanded immediate Washington action on textile situation.

Salem faced the worst situation in its history. Mayor Bates declared as he expressed fear the 260 Pequot Mill employees would be permanently jobless.

Mayor Bates' statement came on the heels of Governor Currier's announcement that a textile squadron of 60 New England representatives would be sent to Washington and remain to fight New England's battle there.

Major Bates said in Salem today he had drawn up a new list of ERA and PWA projects to care for between 400 and 500 more workers. This, however, would care for only one-fifth of the 2500 Pequot employees.

He plans to communicate with Congressman A. Pratt Andrews in order to map his future actions in the textile situation.

Meanwhile a statement issued by the Independent States Federation of America, attacked the "incompetency" of the Pequot closing.

They quoted J. Foster Smith, business agent, as refusing to put 400 workers on welfare rolls by a layoff April 8.

In Washington demands were pushed in Congress today for appointment of a special House committee to investigate the textile situation.

Representative Stivers (D.) of New York charged government policies of the past two years had been ruinous to every branch of the industry.

Minority Leader Smith also attacked the administration policy and declared Southern planters would turn back and start farming if forced to keep their fields idle.

The sub-committee of the President's cabinet committee for investigating the situation, announced a series of informal conferences to begin Monday with leaders of the industry.

DEBATE TO BE HEARD Governor Senator Hale and Maine industrial leaders will debate a declared strike-breaker, put on as fast and furious a street bout in Lynn as one would ever want to see.

HELPED EXPORT MARKET In New Orleans the American Cotton Shippers' Association was told by Charles E. Stuart that the Export-Import Bank has taken two steps to aid producers in holding export market.

The bank is assisting in carrying the risk on exchange where restrictions on money transfer bar extensive transactions by export houses.

In the second place, he said, the bank is extending credit in certain markets to meet the competition of more liberal credit terms.

In Washington, Fred Steele, chairman of the legislative committee of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, scored Roosevelt's dismissal of Japanese textile imports as "ragible."

Japanese goods, he declared, were making a low price market for American goods.

Congressman Richard B. Wiglesworth declared in Brooklyn that the cotton tax was unworkable.

Yesterday the Senate and the House of Missouri passed a bill guaranteeing pensions for the old in this state. No news could be better or more worthy of a great state than that.

Individuals would get thirty dollars a month, couples forty-five dollars. Only the old and poor would have forty-five dollars a month, every month, in real money will mean.

Missouri's Legislature also passed an old age pension bill yesterday. Congratulations.

Individuals would get thirty dollars a month, couples forty-five dollars. Only the old and poor would have forty-five dollars a month, every month, in real money will mean.

Missouri's Legislature also passed an old age pension bill yesterday. Congratulations.

Have you chickens, ducks, lambs? Look out. The coyotes, appearing in New York, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, the cunning little things as babies from ranchmen, take them East.

When the cunning little thing bites the owner, which it always does, soon it is turned loose, and always has a family from three to ten puppies.

The law says that when civil service employees in Washington are reduced, they are to be reduced in the order of seniority.

The President Babcock, of the American Federation of Federal Employees, says he knows of nine cases "living together" outside the bonds of matrimony because of the law.

Representative Cochran of Missouri, who believes, as a Washington compromise bonus bill has threatened difficulties today in the form of a Republican drive for the Vinson bill to pay the bonus in full immediately.

Senate Republicans lined up almost unanimously for the Vinson measure, which was defeated in the House by a narrow margin. Senator McNary minority leader, issued a call for a party conference tomorrow.

The stand of the Republicans threw a scare into the administration cabinet committee for investigating the situation, announced a series of informal conferences to begin Monday with leaders of the industry.

DEBATE TO BE HEARD Governor Senator Hale and Maine industrial leaders will debate a declared strike-breaker, put on as fast and furious a street bout in Lynn as one would ever want to see.

At Augusta, Ga., the resolutions committee of the American Cotton Manufacturers opposed the stand of its president, W. D. Anderson, in being represented as favoring continuation of the processing tax until a substitute for Secretary Wallace and Braintrust Rexford Tugwell.

HELPED EXPORT MARKET In New Orleans the American Cotton Shippers' Association was told by Charles E. Stuart that the Export-Import Bank has taken two steps to aid producers in holding export market.

The bank is assisting in carrying the risk on exchange where restrictions on money transfer bar extensive transactions by export houses.

In the second place, he said, the bank is extending credit in certain markets to meet the competition of more liberal credit terms.

In Washington, Fred Steele, chairman of the legislative committee of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, scored Roosevelt's dismissal of Japanese textile imports as "ragible."

Japanese goods, he declared, were making a low price market for American goods.

Congressman Richard B. Wiglesworth declared in Brooklyn that the cotton tax was unworkable.

EVA Tells the WORLD Mae West Defended

Be 42 Now?

By LOVELLA O. PARSONS
(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Hollywood, April 26—Eva Tangany, old time actress and the girl who made the song "I Don't Care" famous, stepped forward here in defense of her friend, Mae West.

Miss Tangany, with the spirit that characterized her when she was the toast of the stage, bitterly denounced Frank Wallace and his claim that he had been the husband of Miss West.

"Most absurd thing I ever heard," said the "don't care" girl. "I have known Mae since she was a little girl and she was always a blonde."

"Her mother was one of my friends. I used to visit her and continued to be close to the family up to the time Mrs. West died a few years ago."

"I would certainly have known something about a husband. If Mae had married because her mother was always talking about her and hoping she would marry some day."

"Miss West's mother was young and would be only 35 now if she were alive—she knew Mae was 42"—asked the perennially youthful Eva. "Even a bad mathematician knows a girl of 11 couldn't be a mother—at least not in this country."

"I have been wondering," said Miss Tangany, "if Frank Wallace could have married the Mae West who was a burlesque queen for years. She was a tall brunette and a headliner at the Columbia Theater in Chicago."

15 This Week

"That's possible, but I am more inclined to think maybe this Wallace saw a chance to get a little publicity, which is always valuable to an actor."

"Meanwhile, Miss West said that it was true that Eva Tangany had known her ever since she was a little girl and that she had been a good friend of her mother."

"I haven't seen her lately, she was annoyed at me. But she is certainly a loyal friend who isn't letting a past misunderstanding interfere when the truth is to be told," said Mae.

Miss West, who was having her blonde hair shampooed, showed me six more letters from men who claimed to have been married to her.

"That's at least 15 this week," she said.

The West sense of humor is never absent, although Miss West admitted she was getting tired of constantly refuting marriages and unknown husbands.

All the letters weren't from men who put in a matrimonial claim. Some of them were from actors, silent troupeurs who were eager to tell her they knew Wallace and that they knew she had never been his wife.

Among them was one unsolicited letter from a small town in New York signed Rodan Elliott. One excerpt is interesting:

"I am and I was a performer on the Sullivan and Conditine show with the Nat Fields."

"The Girl Behind the Counter." I was with Frank Wallace the whole season of 1911 and I have a picture I dug out this morning of him and the company. You were not in the act."

"Why don't you publish some of these letters to strengthen your denial?" I asked.

"If people need written proof that I am telling the truth don't care to bother with them," said Mae with considerable feeling.

"I am not a liar and never have been so why should I say any more about a matter that is too ridiculous to even discuss?"

5c Heiress Ill in Reno Stepmother Heads East as Rumors Fly

Chicago, April 26—Mrs. Franklin T. Hutton, step-mother of the "five and ten heiress," Princess Barbara Klinton Midway, passed through here en route from Reno, where she will visit for a few days, where she has been told that Barbara herself had deserted Reno and was fleeing toward her husband, Prince Alcius, for a reunion. Princess Barbara, however, her attorney announced, was still in the Nevada city suffering from an attack of influenza. Mrs. Hutton had Princess Barbara's $120,000 private car attached to the Pennsylvania railroad's "New Yorker."

BOY'S OVERLAND TRIP New Mother's Hug Greets Him After Long Bus Ride

Ending his cross-country bus trip from San Diego, five-year-old Arthur Folden was greeted at the Great Eastern Bus Terminal, Boylston street, today by his new mother.

She is attractive Kathleen McKelvey of Beverly, who will return with the boy to the Coast in June to marry his widowed father, Neville Folden.

Mingled with his joy at seeing his new mother for the first time was eagerness to tell all about his lone trip by bus across the continent.

Miss McKelvey was waiting anxiously at the terminal as the bus drew up. She ran to the lad as he stepped down.

Just Like Dad

Motherless child and his mother-to-be hugged and kissed. She held him off and looked at him closely, saying:

"You're just like your father."

The boy's father and Miss McKelvey met last summer while she was visiting her sister in Newport News, Va. Little Richard, whose mother died two years ago, was in San Diego at the time.

Their friendship continued by mail and finally Folden proposed in a letter. She accepted and it was decided to send Richard East to get acquainted with her.

Hatters and wearing corduroy trousers and a black coat, Richard was full of enthusiasm over his great adventure. Through the eyes of a five-year-old boy, America from his window is a magic thing.

Buses Win Him

Western mountains, plains and prairies gripped him until he began passing through the large cities approaching the East. Through it all he was cared for by the bus drivers, he said.

Traveling alone was great fun. They were so kind to him and so attentive that he has decided he will be a bus driver himself when he grows up, he said today.

In addition to making a big hit with the drivers, the lad made a deep impression on his mother-to-be.

She fell in love with him at once.

You can find the car you want at the price you want to pay in the "List of the Four Best" used car specials in today's Boston American.

Nuns to Nurse Dionne Quins

Mme. De Kiriline Will Quit Her Post in May

By Associated Press
North Bay, Ont., April 26—Judge J. A. Vain announced today that sisters of religious order, as yet unnamed, would replace the nurses who have cared for the Dionne quintuplets since shortly after their birth.

The changes are to be made at the end of May.

Judge Vain, who recently was appointed one of the babies' guardians, said Mme. Louise de Kiriline had asked to be relieved of her duties as nurse.

The judge, living in retirement here, was named as one of the guardians to the quintuplets by the Ontario government's legislation making the children wards of the King.

The other guardians are Dr. A. R. Dufresne, the physician to the infants, and Olive Dionne, the father.

Mme. De Kiriline is head nurse at the hospital and is assisted by Yvonne Leroux and Patricia Mullins.

FIREMAN KILLED As Capitol Burns

By Associated Press
Salmon, Ore., April 26—A smoldering black shell was all that remained today of Oregon's State Capitol building, destroyed last night by a fire in which one fireman was killed, and a CCC worker injured.

The fire caused the 137-foot dome to collapse.

The building cost $700,000. Value of equipment, records and historical relics, was estimated at $800,000.

MISSING BOYS Home After 'Trip'

Two 15-year-old boys are back home in Lowell today, but adventure still beckons, they told police. George Mulvey of Livingston street and Daniel Mulvey of Floyd street, Lowell, were found by police today on Atlantic avenue. They revealed that they had "taken the road" to New York, but found the city cold in more ways than one, so they came home the same way they went.

LONGFELLOW Relative Is 79

Gardiner, Me., April 26—Daniel Longfellow, a distant relative of the famous poet, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, celebrated his 79th birthday quietly at his home here. A retired lumber operator, he is believed to be the oldest living mason in Maine.

'SIGN OF THE CROSS' WOUNDS

WOMAN BARES
BLOODY MARKS

Talked to Christ
She Insists

By International News Service
Hempstead, N. Y., April 26—A rare case of stigmata, in which wounds appear on the hands, feet, and forehead from no apparent external cause, was reported here today.

The subject of this phenomena, which has puzzled scientists in numerous parts of the world ever since the time of Francis of Assisi, is Mrs. Mary F. Connors, 56.

Wounds appeared on the palms and insteps of Mrs. Connors and red marks on her forehead on the night of February 8, but news of it did not become generally known until today.

Residing in her cottage here, where she resides with her only child, a son, Mrs. Connors displayed the wounds, not yet completely healed.

"I was saying my Rosary in bed that night," Mrs. Connors, a devout Catholic, explained, "and I fell asleep. I dreamed I was walking along a road, up a hill and suddenly Christ was walking beside me."

'Talked to Divinity'

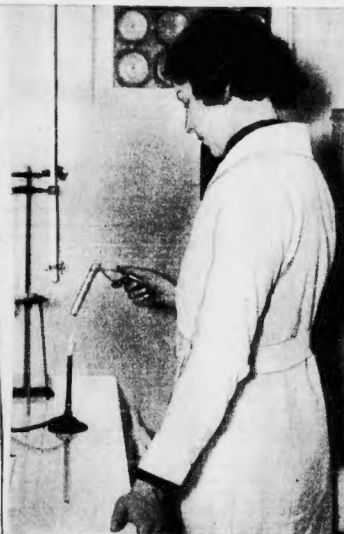

"I asked Him about His suffering on the cross" and His death and He tried to tell me, but couldn't make me understand.

"He took my hands in His and said: 'I will show you.'"

"He touched his fingers to my palms and to my feet and then the dream ended."

"When I awoke my fingers were stiff and my hands and feet ached. I found wounds half an inch deep and an inch long on each of my hands and on each instep. They were the marks Christ got on the cross."

AN EYE For Your LIVER

ELECTRICITY
CHECKS UP

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press science Editor

New York, April 26—How the photoelectric "eye" can check up on liver troubles was described in the American Chemical Society today by Dr. Arnold E. Osterberg of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn.

The eye, adapted to a device called a photometer, records the color of blood samples on a dial. As the dial needle rises it signifies an increasing amount of bilirubin in the blood. Bilirubin is a direct index to liver diseases.

Dr. Osterberg said that with this electric eye a physician can watch the progress of treatment and make more accurate diagnosis.

The electric eye sees the same thing that the human eye observes in jaundice, except that the mechanical device can read changes invisible to man.

Liver troubles produce jaundice in two ways. One is by stopping up bile acid ducts, so that the bilirubin is discharged into the blood. In the other, jaundice comes from blood pigments split up by faulty liver action.

The electric eye distinguishes between the two sorts of liver trouble through use of a little alcohol on the blood under observation.

$50 a Month! OFF THE DOLE for MILLIONS

By Associated Press

Washington, April 26.

AN ADMINISTRATION OFFICIAL DROPPED SOME HINTS TODAY ON WHAT THE MAN ON RELIEF MAY EXPECT FROM THE $4,000,000 WORKS-RELIEF DRIVE PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IS ORGANIZING.

The official refused to be quoted by name, saying he didn't want to "stick my neck up—yet." But he did depart somewhat from the accepted capital custom these days of dismissing inquiries with, "But the President hasn't announced his policy on that yet."

There are now 3,500,000 families doing work, of one sort or another for the federal relief they get. The aim is to provide these, and 1,000,000 more to be taken off the "dole," with work relief in the new drive.

The Hints

They will be paid, it was said, an "average" wage of $20 a month. In some southern sections, where the cost of living and prevailing wages are called "lower," they may get as little as $20 a month. In New York, they may get $100 for some types of activity. Wages will depend upon the geographic location of the project, the type of skill required, and the wage rates prevailing in private lines. They will receive more money than they are getting now, but not so much as private industry is paying, except in some scattered instances where, the official said, private industry isn't making a "living wage."

They will be employed on projects which are decided on at a higher type than in the past. Probably there will be less "boondoggling," (it's like to shoot the man who colored that name," the official commented.)

They will have more continuous employment, in many instances working full time. The 3,500,000 work relief figure will not be constant. The relief load rises to a peak in the late winter, and dips to a valley in the late summer. The program may provide jobs for 2,500,000 when it is put in operation July 1, and for 4,500,000 by next March, the official said. The word here is that at least 90 per cent of the workers on projects will be selected from relief rolls to do work in which they are best skilled. Perhaps 10 per cent will be hired from outside relief rolls in supervisory capacities.

"It looks to me as though that the way it shapes up," the official concluded. "Of course, the President hasn't announced his policy on these things yet."

Throughout the capital, heads of government agencies are awaiting further statements of the President.

Most of these agencies have "backlogs" of projects, or plans which they hoped might come within the scope of the requirements which the President's National Emergency Council and the new all-inclusive board are expected to lay down soon.

BUT FIRST, THEY WANTED TO KNOW PARTICULARS. HOW MUCH MONEY MUST GO FOR LABOR, AND HOW MUCH MUST BE SPENT ON MATERIALS? HOW CLOSE TO A LARGE RELIEF CENTER MUST PROJECTS BE BEFORE IT QUALIFIES?

THE ROAD-BUILDING PROGRAM CONSIST MERELY OF DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS TO STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENTS OR WILL THE GOVERNMENT BUILD SOME HIGH-SPEED TRANSCONTINENTAL "FAIRWAYS"? HOW MUCH "BOON-DOGLING" WILL BE PERMITTED?

Hopkins Heads Check-up Division on Jobs Relief

By Associated Press

Washington, April 26—President Roosevelt today completed his works-relief organization with appointment of Harry L. Hopkins as administrator of the works progress division.

He charged the progress division with the task of checking up and making certain that persons employed on the projects come from the relief rolls.

The United States employment service was given general charge of re-employment of persons on work relief who desire to return to private employment.

With the completion of his administrative machinery, the President called in the principal aide in the works set-up for a general discussion tonight.

POW FOR LA GUARDIA
The President also added to the all-inclusive board, headed by Secretary Ickes, a representative of the mayor's conference. It is understood the mayor has selected Mayor LaGuardia of New York for this post.

Rear Admiral C. J. Peoples, now procurement officer of the government, was placed in charge of procurement of materials for the works projects. This will come under the progress division.

Hopkins will continue his present post of relief administrator to take care of those remaining on relief rolls until the goal of the work campaign is reached.

That is the removal of 3,500,000 persons from relief rolls and giving them jobs.

CONFERENCE TONIGHT
Mr. Roosevelt said again today he expected the states and multipalities to take over unemployables on relief rolls.

Tonight's White House conference will include the big four of the $4,000,000,000 undertaking—Mr. Ickes, director of the emergency council; Secretary Ickes, chairman of the all-inclusive board; Hopkins and Richard C. Tugwell, head of the division for rural resettlement.

Robert E. Wood, Chicago business man, will be the representative of the business advisory council on the important allotment board. Mr. Wood will pass on the distribution of funds for the projects.

New York NRA Invalid, Amended

Albany, N. Y., April 26 (AP)—New York State's NRA enforcement law was held unconstitutional by the court of appeals today, but within two hours Governor Lehman signed amendments to meet the court's objections to the law. The court, four to three, ruled the legislature had no right to "leave to a national administrator to declare what shall or shall not be a crime in New York State."

Governor Lehman anticipated the court ruling by having the legislature pass amendments to give Secretary of State Edward J. Flynn the right to decide whether a code should become state law.

MILLEN UPPROAR FEARED OVER ARRESTS

The news has not yet penetrated the solitude of the death house.

Waiting to die May 7, Murton and Irving Milten had not yet learned, today, that their brother, Harry, and sister, Mrs. Mary Ellen Goodman, were arrested yesterday on charges of plotting their escape. Although prison officials admittedly feared the reaction of the condemned slayers, Warden James L. Hoge said he would not forbid relatives telling the death house inmates.

Now will he bar the accused brother and sister, who are free on bail, he said.

Also Father, who will die with the Milten, was visited again today by his mother, who spent an hour in the dread abode of the doomed.

CHIEFS HIS MOTHER
My boy is standing up well," said the courageous mother. "He has confidence in the supreme court at Washington. He keeps braved up."

She goes to comfort and remains to be comforted, she said. Prison officials admire her spirit.

Rabbi Moses Sedar, was another visitor. The Milten were sleeping peacefully at their table at 10:30. He awakened them.

SHAVE UNDER GUARD
Father and the Milten exchanged no words. The breach developed over a shave. Confusion still exists.

Murton Milten, obviously seething within, remains outwardly the stoic.

Irving is eager for "good news."

He has begun to read prison papers. Guards in the death house carry no guns and no exception has been made in the present case.

The three inmates were shaved today for the first time since their transfer from Dedham jail a week ago yesterday. Their barber, trusty, had to use scissors on their heads before he used his razor.

Guards stood at the cell doors during the process, ready for any move.

RACE TRACK Injunction Denied

Pending a hearing on merits of two new petitions filed yesterday, Judge Sanford D. Gray in supreme court refused today to issue a temporary injunction blocking construction of Suffolk Downs race track.

A date of hearing of the petitions will be set later today. A similar petition filed by Conrad Crooks will also be adjudged at the same time.

NO GAG On Banking Bill
Washington, April 26 (AP)—Dismissing "gag" suggestions, the rules committee decided today to bring the controversial omnibus banking bill before the House Monday under procedure leaving the measure wide open to amendments.

Fifteen hours of debate—more than has been granted on any other bill in session except the social security measure—will be permitted.

Bridgeport, Ct., April 26—Explorer Grant Carveth Wells served signal notice today that there would be another battle before his first wife was paid the $5000 damages she won in her heart balm suit here.

Wife No. 1, Mrs. Lucretia Thordora Wells, won that amount from Mrs. Zetta Robert Wells, the explorer's present spouse.

Wells' attorneys immediately filed a motion to set the verdict aside on the grounds that it was contrary to the weight of the evidence and contrary to the law.

The jury which made the award for the first Mrs. Wells decided several things.

One was that Mrs. Zetta Robert Wells was guilty of alienating the affection of Wells.

Another was that she was also guilty of misconduct with Wells between 1928 and 1932 when the first Mrs. Wells got a divorce.

SUITS FOLLOW VICE CHARGES AT COLLEGE

By Associated Press
Madison, Wis., April 26.—Two suits for slander were under preparation today in answer to sensational charges that University of Wisconsin faculty members were involved in misconduct, and that Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the university, knew of the charges but declined action.

The accusations were made by Chester D. Snell, dean dismissed from the Milwaukee center of the university extension division, in testimony last night before a testimony committee investigating charges of radicalism at state educational institutions.

Snell said he was "put on the spot" by subordinates who objected to his censure over their conduct. Two law firms announced in Milwaukee that they had been retained by a university extension instructor and the daughter of a former regent of the university to institute slander suits against Snell.

The two were named by Snell as having been guilty of unconventional conduct which the dean said he feared would cast a bad reflection on the university if it became known publicly.

When he sought to drop the faculty member from the staff, Snell said, Dr. Frank told him: "If I were you I wouldn't let anything in the professor's private life interfere with his three-year appointment."

Snell's charges, which included a complaint that a male faculty member at the Milwaukee center was acting improperly with girls students, were given some support by Dr. Charles Furin, extension division director, who said he was in agreement with Snell's testimony.

Snell said his charges against the staff member were based on the instructor's overnight visits to the regent's daughter's country home after her husband had left to take an apartment in the city.

BRUNO FUND NEAR $40,000 WILENTZ TELLS RUNYON

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Washington, April 26.—Hauptmann's attorneys say they've got about $18,000 in his appeal fund. "My information leads me to the belief that it is nearer $40,000, exclusive of what Mrs. Hauptmann may have raised."

This statement was made by David A. Wilentz, attorney general of New Jersey, who prosecuted Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the murder of the Lindbergh baby.

Hauptmann is now in the death house in the state prison at Trenton, awaiting execution of the death sentence pronounced by Judge Trenchard at the trial in Flemington, but arguments on his application for a new trial will be heard by the New Jersey court of errors and appeals, the highest in the state, around June 26.

Wilentz continued: "We will, of course, oppose Hauptmann's appeal for a new trial, but we will not participate in any controversy beyond the question as to whether he had a fair trial."

"We think he had. We think the evidence proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that he is the guilty man, and that therefore he is not entitled to another trial."

DAPPER AS EVER
The attorney general, as dapper as ever—but the white felt hat that he wears on wearing—was encountered in the anteroom of the office of Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Asked if he thought Hauptmann will ever confess, Wilentz replied: "He might, if the court of errors and appeals denies his application, but I don't think she will. The way he thinks he will ever implicate anybody else?"

"There is nobody else to implicate."

Wilentz's reply was emphatic. He firmly believes that Hauptmann, and Hauptmann alone, committed the kidnapping and the murder of the Lindbergh child.

PAY OWN APPEAL.
There was some talk after Hauptmann's conviction that he would take a super's oath so that the State of New Jersey would have to pay for his appeal. That was before an appeal for funds from Hauptmann's attorneys brought money in, also before Mrs. Hauptmann started her money raising tour.

There was asked about this. He said: "They are going to pay for the appeal. I sent for Frederick Pope, of defense counsel, some time ago and asked him if they intended to persist in a pauper's oath because if they did I meant to resist it, but Pope said no, they would pay."

It was reported that the cost of the appeal would be around $25,000. Wilentz laughed when the writer repeated the story. He said: "That's ridiculous. It will cost perhaps none."

2 HYDE PARK WOMEN SLIP PRISON PLOT PROSECUTION

Two Hyde Park women, said to have been involved in the Norfolk Prison Colony plot discovered a month ago, will probably escape prosecution, authorities said today.

The women, according to officials, played cat-and-mouse in preparing two loaded revolvers to be smuggled into the prison. The guns were recovered by police in the home of one woman.

In the plot, which was frustrated, five men were engaged, police said. It was a letter, written by one of them and found in the cell of another, that led to finding the guns.

Francis M. Feeney of Dorchester, long term prisoner now in Charles town prison for robbery, is charged with having prepared the letter. It was found in the cell of Thomas Walsh of Dorchester, according to officials.

Besides Feeney and Walsh, alleged to have been in the conspiracy, were three other men. All five were transferred to state prison after the plot was discovered.

The revolvers found, both of which were cited and ready for use, were in a paper bag labeled "Feeney," police said. One woman is said to have brought them to the other woman's home.

The letter said, according to police:

CATHOLIC UNIT TO CONVENT

Mrs. John V. Ballou of East Milton, state regent, will preside at the convention of the Massachusetts Catholic Daughters of America at the Hotel Somerset, May 4 and 5.

Other state officers are as follows: State vice-regent, Miss Lillian C. Clark of Jamaica Plain; state secretary, Mrs. James H. Murray of Dorchester; state treasurer, Mrs. Albert A. Monnelly of Boston; and state monitor, Mrs. Anna E. Murphy of North Adams.

Miss Mary S. Dooley of Dorchester is chairman of the banquet committee. She is assisted by the Misses Dorothy Barker of Hyde Park, Mary Walter of Neponset, Beatrice Noyes of Mattapan, Letitia H. Hearn of Roxbury and Mrs. Jeannette Monahan of Newton.

There will be a reception to the state chaplain, Rev. Joseph P. McElroy, local chaplain and state officers prior to the banquet.

Puma Hunt in Vermont Now Scoffers Will Know

By Associated Press

Chester, Vt., April 26.—If there is a puma prowling around these hills he will do the Irrepressible and Uncompromising Order of Panthers (and probably himself) a favor by making a clean breast of things.

For the U. S. O. of P. is going to organize tonight for a two-fold purpose, viz., to find a panther in the Green Mountains, and to please, once and for all, the up-to-date zodiacs of allegedly pseudo naturalists who have been pooh-poohing the idea for months.

Therefore, anyone who has seen the panther, heard him, seen his tracks—or even thinks he did—is invited to assist in a plan to uncover the much discussed but still elusive feline carnivore.

It all started when the Rev. W. J. Ballou, Chester pastor and acoustician, came upon big foot (or paw) prints on Steadman hill.

Dorchester not a whit by the jobs and scoffing which greeted his suggestion that the marks were those of a panther, Rev. Mr. Ballou made plaster casts of the tracks, sent them to the American Museum of Natural History and was rewarded, he claims, with the opinion they were the prints of a panther.

The story attracted the attention of William Green, lion hunter, who is here with a sack of dogs.

William Beebe, Detroit naturalist who is quoted as having seen the panther, and John Searge, widely known author and president of the Vermont Historical Society, who would like to see the panther.

Together with a Parkville farmer who tells a story of having shot at a panther which followed a deer trail, they will join tonight with Mr. Ballou in the hunt.

DUTCH SCHULTZ FATE TO JURY

By International News Service

Syracuse, N. Y., April 26.—With a last bitter attack, the government today placed in the hands of a jury the fate of Arthur (Dutch) Schultz.

Kingpin beer baron charged with income tax evasions.

And as the 12 men who will decide whether Schultz will join Al Capone in Alcatraz Island prison or go free retired, battlers took the former Bronx beer pedlar into custody.

"How do you feel after the verdict?" a reporter asked Schultz.

Schultz, pale and obviously nervous, replied, almost in a whisper: "This ain't the verdict, son."

Prosecutor John H. McEvoy pictured Schultz as a defiant evader of income taxes, who attempted to "buy his way out" by sending a "shadow" to Washington to effect a compromise.

MARION DAVIES' FATHER DIES

By International News Service

Beverly Hills, Cal., April 26.—Surrounded by his four beautiful daughters, Judge Bernard J. Douras, 82, prominent Beverly Hills attorney and formerly a powerful figure in New York Democratic politics, died in his home here today.

The daughters were Marion Davies, film star; Reine Davies, Ethel Davies and Rose Marie Davies Van Cleave.

Death came in Judge Douras after a brief illness.

In addition to the four daughters, he leaves three grandchildren, Charles and Paul Lederer and Patricia Van Cleave. His wife, Mrs. Rose C. Douras, died on January 23, 1924.

50,000 Sing for Peace, U. S. Bishop Leads Faithful

By Associated Press
Lourdes, France, April 25—Fervent hymns of peace, taken up by 50,000 throats, re-echoed in the mountains fringing this picturesque town today as Catholic priests and prelates led a three-day supplication for good will among nations.

To an American bishop, James Edward Kearney of Salt Lake City, went the honor of singing the hymn this morning.
During the night, a vast throng of pilgrims packed the open space outside the Grotto where Saint Bernadette once reported the apparition of the Virgin. Powerful searchlights illuminated the entrance to the shrine, and myriad lights gleamed in the "capital of miracles."
Many thousands of faithful, who have flocked here for the ceremonies marking the close of the Holy Year, slept on the ground outside the Grotto. Accommodations in Lourdes and neighboring towns and villages were sufficient to shelter only a few hundred.
Many who traveled here, remained only a few hours and then started home. It is estimated 200,000 will have joined in the supplications before the triduum closes.
The 72 hours of continual prayer opened at 4 p. m. yesterday in the presence of Eugene Cardinal Pacelli, personal legate of Pope Pius XI, and Cardinal Baudry, archbishop of Paris.

WALSH SPEEDS LABOR BILL

By Associated Press
Washington, April 25—Chairman Walsh (D., Massachusetts), predicted today the Senate labor committee would report the Wagner labor relations bill out next week.
The committee has been working on the bill daily, but has taken no action on the major provisions. Walsh said there seemed to be little opposition in the committee to the bill.
He predicted that unless opposition arises the bill will be passed without great difficulty.
With the finance committee starting work today on the NRA extension bill, a virtual race developed between the Wagner bill and the recovery law to get to the floor first.
Advocates of the labor bill have served notice they will offer it as an amendment to the NRA bill if it is not previously passed.

3-INCH SNOW, Storm Nears End

Denver, April 25 (INS)—A break in the spring snowstorm which brought 3.6 inches of precipitation in 48 hours was forecast for today.
In the meantime hundreds of motorists throughout Colorado and Wyoming dug their automobiles from drifts, airplanes resumed service on the transcontinental line through Cheyenne, Wyo., and train schedules returned to normal.

Mary Curley to Wed Member of Father's Staff

News of the engagement of Miss Mary Curley, only daughter of the governor, to Lieutenant-Colonel Edward C. Donnelly of the governor's staff, became public today.
The formal announcement of the betrothal was planned for Sunday afternoon at a tea in the governor's mansion in the Jamaicaway.
The Governor expected to make the formal announcement himself on Sunday, and was keenly disappointed at the premature announcement.
About 350 persons, including many high in social and civic circles, have been invited.
Known to many of its intimates of the Curley family for some time, the engagement was not previously published in deference to the governor's wishes.
The wedding date has not yet been announced, but it was said in the affair, one of the most brilliant of the season, will probably be in June.
Mr. Donnelly is 27, the son of Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly of 61 Commonwealth Avenue. He is the head of the outdoor advertising firm which was founded by his grandfather. His father died in 1927.
A graduate of Canterbury School in 1925, Mr. Donnelly was in the class of 1930 at Harvard College. He is an expert horseman.
His sister, Miss Mayline Donnelly, is one of Miss Curley's closest friends and has accompanied the governor and her on many vacation trips.
Miss Curley, who has been mistress of the governor's household since the death of her mother, attended the "Clare" Latin School in Boston, the Convent of the Sacred Heart and Manhattanville College.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

LAWRENCE SHAW NATIONAL DIRECTOR
DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

Keated to unusual enthusiasm over prospects of hearing the "Junior Birdmen March" played for the first time and greetings by military and naval officials, commanders of squadrons throughout New England are summoning their units to meet at 6 o'clock (Daylight Saving Time) next Monday evening in front of radios and listen to the half hour program by the world-famous United States Army band.

These group meetings will be held in homes, stores, Y. M. C. A.'s and wherever there are radios through which members can tune in on WJZ at 760 kilocycles for the program originating at Washington, D. C.
Among commanders who are calling out their flight units is John F. Crowley, head of Squadron No. 5. His members will meet at Adrian Association in Roxbury, in its inviting the squadrons of commanders "Reddie" Manning and "Bob" Green, also of Roxbury, to meet at the same place.

The program will open with the "Birdmen March," written for and dedicated to Junior Birdmen by Lieutenant Thomas F. Dancy, leader of the band of eighty crack musicians.
Congratulations on the strides Junior Birdmen have made in aviation since the organization came into being a year ago will be given by Lawrence Shaw, national director, and greetings will be extended by Captain "Edgar" Bickelstein, head of the U. S. Army Air Corps and Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, U. S. Navy.

Birdmen in 11 Cities To Hear U. S. Army Band

Washington, April 25—Eleven cities where Junior Birdmen of America wing commands number from 3000 to more than 60,000 members will be able to tune in direct on their local radio stations in the birthday broadcast by the U. S. Army Band Monday afternoon at 6 o'clock Daylight Saving Time.
The six other Junior Birdmen wing cities will be able to tune in on a broadcast from easily obtainable stations or will be furnished more direct means within the next two days.

Truck Parley Opens

A representative of the New England Regional Labor Board, sent by Director M. J. McCartin, conferred today in Springfield with union leaders in an effort to bring about a solution to the truck driving strike which has tied up motor freight shipments in New England.

CAPITAL WAITS COUGHLIN MOVE

By Associated Press
Washington, April 25—Absorbed in the preliminary forming of political lines for 1936, the capital sought today to determine the effects of Senator Bailey's denunciation of Father Charles E. Coughlin as a man of "damnable ambition," who seeks to "stir up the fountain of hate in a distressed land among a suffering people."
With third party talk much in the air, observers also watched to see whether an answer might not be forthcoming soon to the question whether Father Coughlin and Senator Long (D., La.) may unite their forces in 1936.
Senator Long was ready to depart for Des Moines, Ia., where he will speak Saturday before the Farmers' Holiday National Convention.
Before a silent Senate, and practicing his remarks with an explanation of why he referred to the clergyman as "Coughlin," rather than "Father Coughlin," Senator Bailey, North Carolina Democrat, said:

"I left off his title, and I did it deliberately. In his church, he can be called 'Father,' but he cannot be called 'Father' in politics."
"There is nothing more sinister in our life right now than this—that Coughlin, from the radio of the Shrine of the Holy Flower, from a shrine in her holy name, that vote after the deplorable of hate throughout the land of liberty, foment the fires of violence, and crucify the American people upon his damnable ambition."
You can find the car you want at the price you want to pay in the "Car of the Year" and our special in the City of Boston.

Tubless Era Seen in ERA Town Survey

In the third of Newton as far as canvassed, 83 homes have been found that manage to get along without a bathtub. CURLEY PLANS HUGE DRIVE ON CRIME

Plans for a State-wide crime drive by all law enforcement agencies of the Commonwealth were prepared today by Governor Curley.

"Hit-and-run motorists who are responsible for a large number of deaths annually will be among the chief targets of the crusade. Plans for the drive have been completed after a series of conferences covering a period of more than two months.

Colonel Paul G. Kirk, commander of public safety and head of the State Police, Police Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeney, representatives of the Metropolitan District Police and of the Police Chiefs' Association of Massachusetts drafted the plans which are soon to be announced by the Governor.

Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles, took an active part in preparing that section of the program which calls for apprehension from this time forward of every driver of a death car.

This is the first time in the history of the Commonwealth that all law enforcement agencies have united in a drive to suppress crime.

'Right Out There, the Hold-Up Was!'

Fred Cutler, president of the Mechanics' Iron Foundry, tells how holdup men, staging a robbery at the door of the establishment, 38 Kremia street, Roxbury, took $1780 in payroll cash from Harry Gibby, assistant treasurer of the firm.

'STUDENT' HELD

Known to an attractive young Brighton woman as "Eddie Britt of Holy Cross," Leila Robinson, 18, of Cedar street, Lexington, pleaded not guilty in Brighton court today to charges of breaking and entering and larceny.

Police allege he broke into the garage of Arthur Beaucharme of Holton street, Brighton, and stole a truck, which he abandoned after a chase in Arlington.

Judge Thomas H. Connelly continued the case until April 30 and ordered him held in $2500.

REPUBLICANS MAP DRIVE

New England Republican leaders today outlined a broad program to be placed before party workers at a six-state conference here next Tuesday as a basis for the national campaign against the New Deal in 1936.

Inaugurating a series of regional gatherings throughout the country, party heads of the six New England states, in four of which control has passed to Democrats in recent years, made clear that policies and plans rather than platform and candidates would be emphasized.

The meeting will bring together leaders and workers, both men and women, of the organization from all the New England states for a full day session.

The leading speakers will be Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, former governor-general of the Philippines; U. S. Representative Theodore Christensen of Minnesota, and U. S. Representative Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts.

DAYLIGHT TIME

Starts on Sunday

Just before you go to bed tomorrow night set your watches and clocks ahead an hour. For when you wake up daylight saving time will be in effect. Officially the time changes at 2 o'clock Sunday morning.

Woman Rescued

A smoldering mattress filled an apartment on Washington street with suffocating smoke early today. Mrs. Annie Peckias, the occupant, was rescued.

Blamed for Crash

United States local inspectors of steam vessels blamed the Northern Light, Boston pilot boat, for the collision six weeks ago with the coast-wise steamer Hampton.

We "get a Lift with a Camel!"

COLLEGE STUDENT. "I smoke a lot, because I find that Camels keep me on the alert... banish that 'dope' feeling," says Alfred Archer. "And what a swell taste they have!"

SOCIETY MATRON. Mrs. Ludlow Whitaker Stevens, of New York, says: "It's remarkable the way a Camel renews your energy."

RANCHER. Charley Bolden, of Richford, Wyoming, adds his comment: "When I get to feeling tired, I smoke a Camel, and my energy perks up right away."

REPORTER. "When I'm feeling 'let down,'" says Marry Nichols, "I get a 'lift' in my energy with a Camel."

ALASKAN EXPLORER. Harold McCracken has this to say: "Camels are mild... yet have a full, rich flavor. They refresh my energy."

HOMEMAKER. "Running a home uses up energy," says Mrs. Rose Kelley. "When I smoke a Camel, I have renewed energy—can go on to the next task."

FARMER. I. A. Bailey: "Like many farmers, I have found a way to rick tiredness. I smoke a Camel and find my energy renewed. Camels suit me right down to the ground."

ENGINEER. "Camels are my choice on taste," says Harry Miller, radio engineer, of Station WOR. "And smoking a Camel helps to relieve fatigue."

COLLEGE GIRL. Listen to Marguerite Omsini: "Smoking a Camel makes me feel fresher... more alert. And what a grand taste Camels have... so mild and appealing."

TRANSPORT PILOT. Maurice Marx, of the United Air Lines, says: "When I feel 'all in,' I pull out a Camel and light up! The tiredness is quickly relieved."

TRANSPACIFIC FLYER. "Camels are my 'super-charger.' They give me new energy and 'go,'" says Ray Charles Kingford-Smith.

SHOPPER. "A long morning in a store is tiring," says Mrs. Van Brent Timpan. "Smoking a Camel makes me feel livelier—tiredness leaves me."

BRIDGE ENGINEER. R. G. Cone says: "It's a strenuous life—bridging the Golden Gate. When I'm worn out, a Camel quickly relieves me of tiredness."

CAMERAMAN. E. E. C. Pinkwood speaking: "Do I get worn out and exhausted? You bet! The way I turn on my energy again is to smoke a Camel."

Junior Leaguers Hear Explorer Tell of Emerald Island Finds

By BETTY ALDEN

DOROTHY WEST and Isabel Lawrence, who have just returned from Ireland and the Continent, have been viewed the historic Emerald Isle through far different eyes than Dorothy's cousin, Hallam Movius, Jr., who described the excavations of the Harvard Archaeological Expedition to Ireland for the enlightenment of members of the English Speaking Union yesterday afternoon at the Junior League Ballroom.

Dorothy's and Isabel's observations might be described as those of practical, intelligent American girls examining the landscape and social structure of a foreign country from the "ground up" . . . while Mr. Movius was engaged in quite the opposite direction . . . burrowing into the strata of Irish soil to unearth illuminating facts about the social customs of the pre-historic Celt.

The entertainments of the English Speaking Union are noted for being extremely interesting, but when the lecturer happened to be a son of one of our first families the audience was even more distinguished and generous with applause than usual. . . Mr. Movius' mother, Mrs. A. L. West Movius, his great-aunt, Mrs. Philip Saltonstall, and his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. George S. West, were in the audience, which included many friends of the West family and a large number of the younger set.

English Styles Rule

DOROTHY AND ISABEL were both there to see Cousin Hallam's pictures of the sites excavated by his group of men and of some of the remains of pre-historic art which were unearthed. . . Isabel might have purchased her brown and white printed dress and brown straw off-the-face hat either in Paris or in her mother's shop in Newbury street, but her shoes were certainly labelled "Bond Street," and Dorothy's navy and gray woolen sport dress had all the ear-marks of English fabric.

Nancy Whitman, Cornelia and Catherine Pentecost, who have often danced the light fantastic with the distinguished young lecturer, went to hear and see the results of his "digging" in Ireland.

Mrs. George Baker Present

MRS. GEORGE BRAMWELL BAKER, Mrs. Francis W. Bird with her daughter, Miss Anna Bird, Mrs. Christian A. Herter, Mrs. Frederick Eaton, Mrs. William Eaton, Mrs. Gardiner Fluke in a spring suit which combined a short mustard jacket with a black skirt and black accessories, George West Movius, Mrs. Richard Thompson and Rue French were other friends and admirers of the young guest speaker.

While listening to Mr. Movius we recalled hearing about the recent fashion show in New York which set the whole town talking. . . It appears that the elite of Mayfair are getting bored with seeing nothing but debutantes on the runway at fashion parades so they conceived the idea of a show for gentlemen, with a crew of husky brothers and husbands culled from the ranks of Gotham society to do the modelling.

We noticed that Mr. Movius was the center of all feminine attention and thought he would be quite an attraction in a masculine fashion show, with his broad shoulders, and fresh blond complexion.

The up and coming young wives and sisters of some of Beacon Hill's ex-football or rowing stars, would be thrilled to sit back and let the men do the work for a change just as the girls in New York who conceived the idea for one of their charity affairs. . . Bill Cox, George Movius, Devens Hamlen, Tim Clarke and Mason Hammond would certainly have a hushed and excited audience waiting for them to trip and pirouette down the runway displaying the last word in masculine attire.

Stars in Style Show

SWATHED IN TULLE and looking very sweet, Mrs. Allston Boyer (Charlotte Young) of Boston, was the indispensable bride in the wedding scene in the New York show but eyes were upon the handsome bridegroom, Lucius Beebe, a young man about town who has lots of acquaintances in Boston.

The idea of the show was such a success that even in the "going away" scene the well dressed bridegroom stole the show from the bride.

Speaking of Mrs. Allston Boyer turns our thoughts to Mrs. B. Loring Young, her mother, who has joined the fashionable colony in Milton where she has taken a house on Brush Hill road. . . Lorraine Young is with her.

Mrs. Philip Spalding of Milton, who recently returned from a trip to Ireland to visit her son and daughter-in-law, the Hobart-Spaldings (Alice Burr), has left on another journey which is taking her via the Canal to California. . . She will be returning to Milton in about three weeks.

Delegates Register for Conference

Mrs. Laurence M. Lombard, chairman of the Volunteer Service committee of the Boston Family Welfare Society, is one of the many volunteers who plan to attend the spring meeting of the New England Conference of Family Welfare Societies, to be held on April 28 at the Parker House.

Air registered for the conference from the Boston Society are Mrs. William H. Goodwin, Mrs. Henry A. Schwartz and Mrs. George E. Abbott, all members of the Boston Junior League. Other delegates include Mrs. Holmes Hinkley, Mrs. Matthew Hale, Miss Ellen Hale, Mrs. Mabel Hobbs and Mrs. Edward S. Dromme. From the Far by Welfare Society in Portland, Me., the delegates will include a group of Junior League members, Mrs. Herbert Payson, Mrs. John Palmer and Mrs. C. Fred Smith. Junior League members who are coming in the interests of the Worcester society are Miss Frances Churchman, Mrs. Raymond Childs, Mrs. Robert Kennedy, Mrs. David Priest, Mrs. Ruth Edmonds and Mrs. George Brown.

N. E. CATHOLIC Clubs Convene

The three-day convention of the New England Province of the Federation of College Catholic Clubs opens with a formal dinner at the Hotel Somerset tonight. William F. Leary of Boston University is general chairman.

Following the business session tomorrow afternoon, a tea dance will be held at the Hotel Vendome. A corporate communion will be held at the Holy Cross Cathedral Sunday morning at 9 o'clock.

Gay Amateur Night Features Festival

"AMATEUR NIGHT," the rage which has been sweeping the country, was officially accepted by Boston's gay young set last evening. A singing contest between 10 talented young ladies was the feature of the entertainment at the Spring Festival given at the Barclay Club for the benefit of the Governor John A. Andrew Home, by a group of debs headed by Catherine Walsh.

The program also included solo dances by Lucille and Harriet Blake and an impromptu burlesque by a group of Harvard lampooners as a publicity stunt for their forthcoming issue of the Lampoon.

Miss Walsh, who was wearing a pink dress and a wide sash of emerald green, flitted almost as much as the winner with her crowning of two popular songs.

Miss Walsh, who was escorted by the head usher, Carl Pfeiffer, wore a sumptuous gown of pink organza fashioned with tiers of ruffles and her hair was pinned in a wave of blue slipper satin. Evelyn Waterhouse helped to enliven the party with her song and happy manner and Miss Allen Smith was there with her friends.

MISS LAURIE MARRIES AT PRETTY RITES

PLANS HAVE BEEN COMPLETED by the committee in charge, for the twentieth anniversary luncheon of the Philomatheis Club to be held tomorrow at the Copley Plaza Hotel. President Mrs. Vincent P. Roberts announces as soloist, Miss Clotilde Zappala, operatic soprano.

Invitations have been extended to the founders of the club, including Mr. Hugh C. McGrath, Dr. Timothy Murphy, Mr. James Carney and Mr. Edmund Brandon, whose father, the late Edward Brandon, was also a founder.

The president also announces on Sunday afternoon, April 28, the officers and members of the club will be guests of the rector, Very Rev. Louis J. Gallagher, S. J., and the faculty of Boston College at tea to be held in the auditorium of the Library building, Boston College, at 6 o'clock.

Frederick Paulding, noted dramatist and author, will read a new play, "The Secret Agent." Miss Marcelle Eberle is chairman of the luncheon.

A bridge, fashion show and tea, to be presided by the Massachusetts Chapter of the Mount St. Mary's Alumnae, Saturday, May 4, will have the beautiful setting of the Salle Moderne, at the Hotel Vendome, as a backdrop.

Under the direction of Miss Mary Burns, extensive plans are being made to entertain the several hundred guests from all sections of the state, who are expected to attend Philomatheis Dance.

The Junior Philomatheis Club will climax its activities for the season with a formal dance to be held at the Hotel Vendome on Tuesday evening, May 7. The arrangements are in the hands of a large committee headed by Miss Lucille O'Malley of Chestnut Hill.

She will be assisted by the Misses Ruth Murphy, Rosemond Adams, Frances Battigan, Anna Mahoney, Betty Walsh, Constance Reardon and Muriel Kingley.

The Catholic Poetry Society of Boston announces a public lecture on next Sunday at 3 p. m. in the Crystal Room of the Hotel Kenmore by Rev. Terence L. Connelly, S. J., on G. K. Chesterton's great poem, "The Ballad of the White Horse."

Dr. Connelly is a professor of English Literature in the graduate school of Boston College.

The choice of Chesterton's well known poem for the coming reading and lecture is significant.

This year marks the 400th anniversary of the death in England of the Catholic martyr Blessed Thomas More and Blessed John Fisher whose canonizations are expected will take place in May.

Miss Mary Antonelli, McInnis is chairman of the committee for the lecture, and Miss Donna Lombardi will be in charge of the following refreshments: The Misses Anne McNamara, Alice McNamara, Margaret Kelly, Mary Fowler, Eileen Meany, Madeline O'Brien and Catherine McQuerry.

Pictures 'Live' at Benefit

THE MANY WOMEN who attended the exhibition of Living Pictures, which was given for the benefit of the Mount Pleasant Home for Aged Men and Women at the Hotel Somerset, yesterday, found the program both interesting and instructive.

Dr. Frank Hardy Damon described the various representations of the old masters which ranged from Whistler's Mother to Japanese Prints and even one example of Modern Mexican art.

The young ladies who posed for the pictures were Miss Deborah Blossom, Miss Harriet Becker, Miss Marjorie Kendrick, Miss Marjorie Winchcombe, Miss Barbara Dine, Miss Janet Hale, Miss Barbara Stetson, Mrs. Arthur Gould, Miss Jane Green, Miss Sophie Green, Miss Bernice Goldstein, Miss Olga Currier, Mrs. Blossom and Miss Janet Hale.

Among those seen in the fashionably dressed audience were Mrs. Willard P. Richards, chairman of the ladies' committee of the home, wearing a very spring-like Parisian creation of flowered silk.

Popular Navy Blue

The new popular navy blue was chosen by Mrs. Alfred Nichols of the picture for her woolen suit. F. A. Morill, who drove up from Gloucester accompanied by her daughter, Miss Marianne Morill, was a becoming brown sports ensemble, while Mrs. Morill chose a green woolen suit.

Pleated silk was worn by both Mrs. Frank G. Towne and Mrs. John E. Dykeman of Brookline. Mrs. Dykeman's costume being completed by a black redingote. ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

Sit Tight
When Flattery
Lures Your Husband

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

IT MIGHT be amusing, if the tragic element could be eliminated, to think of a husband as a pawn shoved around a chessboard by a group of women whose only claim to him is the good time he gives them.

One neglected wife wonders what she can do about it, or if she can do anything at all. Her letter follows:

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: "We've been married seven years, have two children and were very happy until my husband was ordered by his firm to start a branch office in another city. He had letters of introduction to what I shall call the country club set, the ladies of which don't seem to have a thought beyond cocktails, cards and flirtations.

"They swooped down on him like a flock of vultures—all of them. Finally several of the contestants were shoved from the field and the victors settled down to one family, a good-looking mother who is forty-five, her unmarried sister who is thirty-five and the daughter of the family, aged 22. These ladies now own my husband completely.

"PLAY-GIRLS "When the children and I came to town I supposed naturally these play-girls would call. But not on the contrary, when my husband took me to a restaurant to dine they beckoned him to a table where they sat, and tried to make him stay. None of them came across to speak to me. "My husband, who has been read a gentleman, should know how under these women are. But he is so flattered at having been taken up by this family that he does not realize their commonness. My pride prevents me from mentioning this, as I think it stupid for any woman to appear catty.

"Can you imagine anything more humiliating than to have them call me up at the house and say: 'Please tell Harry to come to a cocktail party tomorrow afternoon?' They know in their hearts they are giving the message, and ignore the fact I am Harry's wife. "Sometimes I think of taking the children and going to mother's for a long visit. But my day with my husband comes to his sense, or until we are divorced in the interest of one of these possessive women.

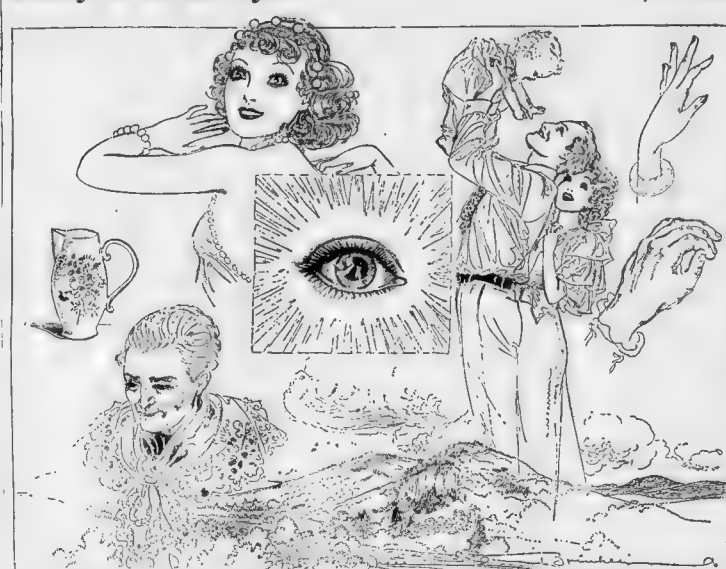

"HURT WIFE "Nothing could be more ill-advised than to consider going to your mother's at this time. Flattery has gone to your husband's head, and he will wait until he comes to his senses. It's a trying time, just as it is when we wait around a hospital for someone we are fond of to come out of the ether. And flattery is ether, my dear lady.

"GOLD-DIGGERS "So far you have nothing to charge these women with but a lack of good breeding, but if you desert the field and leave your husband for these lady wolves to gobble up, the situation may be serious, indeed.

"Your first consideration is, of course, the welfare of your children. And there is nothing more steadfast anchor for a husband than the love of his children. Send your order to Boston American Pattern Department, 233 West 18th Street, New York, N. Y.

Beauty Is in the Eyes

THE ARTIST, the beauty-of-women expert, the poet, the charm-analyst, the interpreter of things spiritual, times out of number, all make the EYES the touchstone of Beauty. If the eyes are beautiful—

I am not meaning that, when I say "beauty is in the eyes." It is the eye that sees Beauty. The loving son or daughter thinks the old parent beautiful. So does the artist think the face of a characterful old person beauty. The one mingles the constant memories of the changing face of a mother or father from the day it was youthful, with the old face, and cannot separate the two. The artist thinks it beautiful without ever having known it in the smooth, clear bloom of youth. Devoted love helps the eye; perception the other.

Only the face of nature can supply the balm of beauty to the heart and soul, for one man. A golden sky at sunset, or a valley in the spring, can straighten out his world for him for a month. AND—the father and mother of a baby think it the most beautiful thing alive! As you probably know. —NELL BRINKLEY.

Given in MarriageMADGE GOES,
BUT FATHER
DISAPPROVES

CHAPTER 225

MY FATHER told Lillian that I might go with him, "against his better judgment," on the expedition to bring back the bound and gagged Chinese whom we had left in the woods.

He turned away abruptly, walked to the car of the Chinese in which we had, brought Hugh back to the farmhouse, and bent over his hood as if he were appraising it.

But I knew that the movement was only subterfuge, and I gripped Lillian's arm in sudden panic.

"He really disapproves of my going with him on this expedition," I whispered. "Perhaps I would."

"Of course he does, the archaic darling," Lillian murmured back. "But that isn't going to make any difference to you. If I had any buttons to shed in Peggy's fashion, I would have burst them all in the tremendous effort I made to win him over to the idea of your going back into those woods. And now that I've passed the tape you're not going to upset any records unless you trample my dead body in the effort. So go over and get into the Vertzen limousine—Otto is standing attention already—and strut your stuff without fear or trembling. I'll attend to everything here. Good hunting!"

GETTING UNDER WAY She threw up her right hand in the little comradely gesture which had become so many times in our long association, and I walked over to the big car beside which Otto was standing. He helped me in, and I was no longer seized than my father appeared at the door with Hank beside him.

"Well, start now, Otto," he said. "Bill, Ronald and Bob will follow us closely in the lighter car. It seems to be in good condition."

"If I suppose I'm to tell Otto where he is to go, I'd better sit up front with him." "That's a very good idea," my father said, adding impatiently, "Better get in. We don't want to delay getting down there any more than we can help." "Please wait a second!" I said under my breath to my father, putting my hand on his as he spoke. He clasped it tenderly, and listened without comment as I spoke to my husband's young wife.

"What is it, Hank?" I asked, smiling at him, and the boy's face brightened.

HANK'S SUGGESTION "Why, I wondered if when we get down there, at the entrance to that little road into the place where we left the Chinese—I mean, the Chinese—I've stammered, with a sidelong, apologetic glance at my father—it wouldn't be better to let the little car go first. Their wouldn't be any room for the big car to pass the other one, and there sure isn't room for the big car to turn around. It can get in all right, so nobody can see it from the main road, but it'll have to back out."

Hank's face turned a brick red. "It wouldn't make sense for me to be suggesting things," he said, and healed.

TO HIDE CHINESE "Not if it's as sensible a suggestion as the last one," my father said. "Out with it."

"Why, I thought if we were bringing those two Chinese back with us, there'd be less chance of their being seen if they were down on the floor of this car. And oughtn't we to have some empty suitcases to pile on top of them, so that if anybody—anybody—should happen along and take a look, why—perhaps—maybe—"

The boy's voice trailed off in an agony of embarrassment, but my father hastened to reassure him. "Well, have you in the secret service if you don't look out; he said, with one of his rare laughs. "Now scuttle into the house and get Mrs. Underwood to give you about five bags or suitcases, three pillows suitable for the car, and two automobile blankets. Take the other boys with you, and make haste."

Mrs. Culbertson on Bridge
Even Experts Err

All the knowledge in the world does not prevent an expert player from making occasional blunders.

When he does something terrible, he has the comfort of thinking that last week a famous player probably did something much worse.

In the match between Mr. and Mrs. R. Hal Sims and my husband and myself, all four of the contestants made these share of errors. Today, I will show you an error of which my husband, Ely Culbertson, was guilty; tomorrow, I will tell one on Mr. Sims, Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable:
Mr. Sims 0142
Mrs. Culbertson 0142
Mr. Culbertson 0142
Mrs. Sims 0142

The bidding:
South West North East
1♠ Pass 1NT Pass
2♣ Pass 2♦ Pass

Mr. Culbertson, who was South, dealt and bid one spade. This is a perfectly correct bid; an opening two-bid would be dangerous, for if my hand turned out to be honorless and in distribution, a game contract could be set two or three tricks.

It is bad enough to be set when you hold a weak hand; with a strong hand, there is seldom any excuse for inviting a big set.

Having two Queens and two Jacks, which justify a shadest of trump value to the 1888 Culbertson System, I was able to keep the bidding open and give my partner another chance. But here Mr. Culbertson made his mistake.

He had failed to open with a two-bid because that bid is fore-

New Way of Beautifying Eye Brows

By JULIE SHELBY

FASCINATING Carole Lombard knows how to crown her beautiful eyebrows to good advantage.

Have you ever stopped to think how quickly your eyebrows express your reactions?

Percy Westmore, Hollywood makeup man for the Inglenood studio, believes the eyebrow is the most expressive part of the face. The eyes can lie, he claims, but never the eyebrow.

If you have a lovely natural arch, by all means keep it. But if your brows meet and make you look as if you were scowling, or if they reach too close to your eyes, there's a little plucking. Trim underneath in preference to the top; be sure that each hair is pulled out by the root and not broken off.

A new idea in combining the simplicity of workability of manicure scissors with the modern look is the dainty gadget pictured above.

It insures both ease and accuracy in shaping the brow, since its round ends permit full vision of the brows.

A feminine touch of color is introduced in the hairdressing, which may be chosen in six colors—red, brown, blue, green, orange and rose. I might add that it sells like hotcakes.

To learn the name of this new type of tweezers, call Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American. She is a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dead in His Room

The body of Frank Clark, 65, was found in his room at the Hotel South End, today by his landlady, Miss Josephine Crimmins. Police summoned Medical Examiner Timothy Leary, who pronounced death apparently due to natural causes.

Martha Lee Suggests
Lamb for Week-End Menu

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAR

Lamb is selling at exceptionally low prices this week-end, and for a special dinner, we would suggest the crown roast of lamb. The crown roast is made from a double rack of lamb, with the rib bones pointing up in the shape of a crown. This is cooked by roasting. If the crown is filled with a dressing, the roast should be placed right-side up on a rack in an open roasting pan. In this case, it is necessary to wrap the ends of the rib bones with salt pork or bacon in order to prevent charring. We have replaced this with strips of carrot cut to fit the bones, with a tiny sprig of parsley over the top, before serving the roast.

If the crown is not filled during cooking, turn it upside-down, and in this case the rib ends need not be wrapped with bacon or salt pork, nor are the fat mells and runs down, it will keep them moist.

Here is an excellent dressing, seasoned with fresh mint or watercress, to serve with the lamb: 2 cups fine, dry bread crumbs, 1 cup fresh mint leaves or 1/2 cup finely cut watercress, 3 tbsp. chopped celery, 4 tbsp. butter

1/2 cup finely cut watercress, 1/2 cup salt, 1/2 cup pepper

Melt half the butter in a skillet and add the onion and celery. Cook for two minutes, then add the finely cut mint or watercress and the bread crumbs. If using watercress, allow the liquid which cooks the onion to go to water. Then scoop this mixture to one side of the skillet and in the empty part, melt the remaining butter and stir in the bread crumbs. When they have absorbed the butter, mix all ingredients together.

For a dinner suggestion for a guest meal would be broilers, selling at 20c to 25c a pound; or roasting chickens, selling around 30c a pound.

Remember the Lenten season is over, we have not reached the end of the supply of fish and eggs, for the fish shipments are heavy, as usual.

This year's fresh mackerel is quite plentiful, selling at 21 cents to 20 cents a pound for the tinker, and the first run of herring has arrived, selling at 21 cents a pound. Also available are cod, haddock, flounders, clams scallops and oysters, at reasonable prices. Eggs are as cheap as they probably will be. The nearby are selling for 37 cents to 40 cents, the Western 22 cents to 30 cents.

If you consider asparagus at 30c a large bunch still in the luxury class, you might choose dandelion greens for your vitamin this week-end. They are selling at 3 lbs. for 20c. Or you may get them from your own yard. Be sure to cut them before they bud or blossom, for this growth develops a bitterness in the dandelions. Try this German dressing for the greens:

GERMAN DRESSING
3 strips bacon
1 tsp. flour
2 egg yolks
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup vinegar
Pepper, salt, paprika

Cut the bacon in small pieces, fry lightly and remove from fire. Add flour and blend well with bacon fat. Stir in beaten egg yolks, add water and vinegar and simmer over a low fire a few minutes until smooth. Season to taste. Pour hot dressing over dandelion greens, which have been washed and picked over.

Wrestling Clients Look for Drama At Garden Tonight

ON THE MORBID PRINCIPLE that wrestlers cease to be flesh-and-bone people when they become wrestlers and that some mysterious chemical transition makes them immune to the sufferings of plain persons, the patrons wish to see something entirely terrifying tonight at the Boston Garden.

It has been quite a spell since two lodge brothers of the mat have injected a dramatic novelty in their athletic histrionism and, without wishing to see anybody hurt more than 50 cents' worth, it is about time they dash their skulls together in a common swoon or go running around the ring in the rubbish, and Strangler Lewis, the gaunt old gnome, meet in mutual assault.

I offer this idea, because I wish to be helpful, and because I must get rid of this idea to make room for more ideas.

Harris Returns to Cemetery of His Hopes

TODAY BUCKY HARRIS, the marcelled manager and ex-cellent boy, who rose to riches and fame in baseball, comes back to the scene where his greatest ambitions were buried last September.

Harris was shocked more than his refined grumblings betrayed when he was suddenly shot down the laundry tube by the Red Sox to make place for Joe Cronin. And, although he fell into a job almost immediately with Cronin's daddy-in-law at Washington, he felt pained to leave what he had called "baseball's best spot" for one that is fraught with all the intolerance and prejudice of a corn belt village or a sugar bush town.

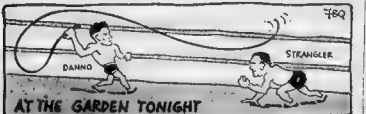

Being a fighting type under his cake frosting of gentility, Bucky did not public screaming when he lost his job, and he offered no insults to his former hired man in Boston by calling them "apple-cheeked apprentices," as he had referred to his Tiger athletes when he left Detroit.

He hoisted his chin, which is bony as chins go, and went to work at reduced pay. It was something of a tough task, since he was working for the pay-by-marriage of the man who took his place.

It bespeaks the sincerity of baseball that Cronin wound up last Sunday punch in the early games against the team belonging to his wife's father and spanked three bold blows that he gave the Washington scribes to squawking in print and gave Clark Griffith much private pain.

I asked Cronin only lately, "Suppose Washington were running a front race for the pennant, and in the final day of the race you came to bat against the club, knowing that a hit would knock them out of the Series money?"

And Joe said with a touch of scorn, "I'd take a toe-hold and try to belt the ball out of the park," meaning, of course, that his kinship for the Senators' owner would have no sway on his baseball loyalties.

Babe's Old Trainer Speaks

BEFORE LEAVING TOWN with the Yankees, "Doc" Earl Painter, who for five years acted as Babe Ruth's male nurse, smeared him with iodine, strapped his muscles with tape and prescribed kitchen remedies for his aches, gave me a trainer's measure of the Babe's physical condition.

Said Painter, who is a pedantic man and a stickler for serious facts:

"We humans begin to die from birth . . . Having leanness toward perspiring, the 'Doc' could not resist such an entrance to the subject. . . and as each muscular cell burns out, through the years, a tiny bit of scar tissue remains, so that the body gradually becomes a mass of such minute scars and the free action of youth is hampered.

And by long use the veins and arteries of the legs shrink, so that the blood supply dwindles and no longer feeds the muscles properly. Fatigue increases and endurance fades. And that is what has happened to the Babe." A physician would read this, I point out, that the quotes are "Doc's," since I learned years ago, after many yells by mail from practitioners, to advance no medical theories of my own.

"Eskie's" Visit to Easton

HERE MCCRAKEN'S DECISION not to return as coach of Lafayette College's football team simultaneously with the visit of Harvard's Easton, Pa., at the invitation of Lafayette's president. Clark has been Billingham's second in command for the last ten years. "Man alive! he's as old as I am," were the glowing first words of Sam Langford, when the bandages were removed from his ancient, punch-bruised eyes, after an operation.

The Deans, pitching brothers of the Cardinals, are fighting a legal battle to retain the use of their nicknames, Dizzy and Daffy. A New York sweater maker, who manufactures "Dizes" and "Daffes" coats, is seeking to restrain them, which seems the height of impudence. Yet, it was not so many seasons since the Dean boys resented the nicknames as disparaging to their mental abilities.

Since 1915 Babe Ruth has played in 10 open day games, in nine of which he hit home runs. In 1922, when he tangled with Landis over the harvesting rule, since deleted, and in 1924, when he suffered a 30-day stomach ache, he missed the starting games. . . First night game in the National League will come on May 23 at Cincinnati, between the Reds and Philadelphia

GROVE On Hill TODAY

MAKE OR BREAK TEST

By Joe Cashman
"Lifty" Grove goes today.

Baseball's most illustrious question mark makes his second start of the season when he faces "Rucky" Harris' Washington Senators, who open a three-game series with our Red Sox at the Fens.

There could be no more important demand news at the moment.

For the Cronin crew seems certain to be a serious pennant contender or just another club with an outside chance of winning the flag, depending on whether Robert Moses regains his former wizardry or remains a $15,000 flop.

And Bob's showing before the Ladies' Day audience will go a long way toward settling the question of his status.

His first start, against the same Senators in Washington a week ago, told little or nothing.

Some experts claimed he looked his old self, explaining the large hit total by saying two were bunts and three very lucky.

BUCKY VS. JOE

Others, as numerous and as competent, reported he looked very ordinary.

Maybe the same difference of opinion will be possible after his performance this p. m., but it's extremely doubtful. It's not in the cards for any club to be lucky in two successive starts against and above when he's right.

If he's hit hard, it will indicate he's lost his speed, probably never to regain it, for his arm is as strong, loose and free of pain as it was when he was the mightiest of moundmen.

Whatever happens to Grove the Sox are sure to fly not only today but as long as the Senators are in town. What with "Bucky" Harris and Joe Cronin, once master and pupil, each sure to shoot the works an effort to show up the club he managed last season.

So far the edge is all with our Joseph, son-in-law of Clark Griffith, Washington owner, who sold the Sox to the Sox for a price of $250,000 and then took a small hunk of the dough to engage "Bucky," who had been let out here.

The Sox went in the capital last week and copied three decisions in as many starts.

SOX UNPERCHED

The Senators line up today with Kuhl, Meyer, Lary and Travis in the infield; Manush, Powell and Stone in the outfield; and Bolton catching.

The Sox enter the series no longer league-leaders.

They were getting a lot of bad news out of their games going down before the Yankees, 12 to 1, last Sunday, and today slipped into first place.

The final game of the series was remarkably well pitched by Ben Cantwell, who defeated the Giants in Boston last week. Yet Ben lost, 2-1, when Ott knocked in the fourth inning with one on.

The home boys are expected to pile up their superiority in the smaller divisions, however, for another year, winners come to James Magill, the Irish 160-pounder, called Ireland's greatest fighter and a dread.

To offset possible losses in these divisions, the United States has among others such clever boys as the following: Albert Solari, Somerville, and Abe Denner, West End, 126 pounds; Jimmy McCarron, Somerville, and Abe D'Amelio, Macbride, 135 pounds; Jackie Capparello, Boston, and "Irish" Johnny Smith, Quincy, 147-pounds.

Left London All Atwitter

Senorita Anita Lizana of Chile, hailed as another Suzanne Lenglen, winning the Tally-Ho tennis championship in England, defeating some top-ranking English stars with ease in a startling triumph. "Alarming," was the verdict of the English who saw Senorita Anita play.

Wedding Chimes Bring Happy Times

After 33 victories in a row, Dan O'Mahoney is thrown for his first fall, D. J. Cupid, the kid himself, doing the throwing. Danno's in love. He's going to get married. Not right away but after a visit to his folks in Ireland next summer. He's shown with his bride-to-be, Esther Burke of Cambridge. Tonight at the Garden, Danno meets "Strangler" Lewis, and Esther will be at the ringside, cheering her handsome fiancé who'll probably find enough inspiration in this romantic setting to smother the sinister "Strangler."

BRAVES Move to BROOKLYN

MULLIGAN CAN HIT WILL PROVE IT MONDAY

OSBORNE HIS TOUGHEST FOE

Brooklyn, April 26—Glad to get out of New York with their lives, the Braves take on Monday night in the opening game of the series.

Ed Brandt was to hurl for the Tribe and Dutch Leonard for the home side.

Brooklyn is leading the National to date, and much is expected of the team this year under George Stenetz.

The Braves are capable of making a much better showing than they did in New York.

First, there isn't a warrior on the club who doesn't figure they could beat the Giants again.

The final game of the series was remarkably well pitched by Ben Cantwell, who defeated the Giants in Boston last week. Yet Ben lost, 2-1, when Ott knocked in the fourth inning with one on.

Mulligan towers well over six feet and weighs about 210 pounds. He is as clever as most heavyweights as a boxer but far ahead of the majority as a puncher.

It is said that he is doubly so as hard as Matt Flanagan, Irish heavyweight on the last team of invaders that fought here six years ago.

The United States should win the tournament through force of numbers, for in each of the five international classes, Uncle Sam has two entrants against one each from Ireland and Canada.

The home boys are expected to pile up their superiority in the smaller divisions, however, for another year, winners come to James Magill, the Irish 160-pounder, called Ireland's greatest fighter and a dread.

To offset possible losses in these divisions, the United States has among others such clever boys as the following: Albert Solari, Somerville, and Abe Denner, West End, 126 pounds; Jimmy McCarron, Somerville, and Abe D'Amelio, Macbride, 135 pounds; Jackie Capparello, Boston, and "Irish" Johnny Smith, Quincy, 147-pounds.

IRISH MARVEL 6-5 FAVORITE

Aggressiveness, Courage, Youth Should Lick Veteran

By Jack Conway

New England's wrestling battle of the century will be dropped into the Garden tonight when youthful Dan O'Mahoney makes the supreme effort of his career against Strangler Lewis in a finish bout, best two falls out of three.

Danno, 22 years of age, the Irish champion, the strongest man in the world, and winner of 34 straight bouts since coming to the United States.

Lewis, 44 years old, a wrestler over a 30-year-old, three times a world champion, the name in the mat game that Dempsey is to be . . . Ruth to baseball.

It is expected that a capacity crowd of 10,000 persons will witness the match.

RETURN BOUT

Paul Bower, the competitor for the Boston Police Post, American Legion, who are promoting the bout, announced today there are still thousands of choice seats.

They say the huge seating capacity of the Garden will enable all who wish to do so to see Danno and the Strangler in action.

MAIN BOUT

Dan O'Mahoney, Ireland, vs. Strangler Lewis, California.

SEMI-FINALS
Gino Garibaldi, Italy, vs. Bull Martin, New Jersey.

PRELIMINARIES
Lou Macdonald, Colgate, vs. Scotty Dick, Dartmouth, New York, vs. Leo Numa, Seattle.

Frank Spelman, Brown, vs. Henry Flinn, Holland.
Dick Shikat, Germany, vs. Jim Driscoll, Ireland.

Scotty Dick, Omaha, vs. Arthur Lefevre, Canada.
Eugene Moran, Newport, vs. Marshall Maitz, Waltham.

(First bout at 8:15. Main event at 10 p. m.)

O'Mahoney is favored to win at odds of 6 to 5. It is another instance of where the speculative element is backing youth. They figure Danno's youth, aggressiveness and tremendous courage give him the edge.

The Lewis supporters point to the fact the Strangler has been at his best in the important bouts. He wants to prove he licked O'Mahoney in London and that the young Irishman has been sailing under false colors.

The Strangler called George a second fighter after the latter had won the title from Gus Sonnenberg.

"You're an old man, and I'll make you eat your words," replied Lewis when in two straight falls and had the last laugh. He used a hammerlock to gain the victory.

CAREFUL, DAN

It is expected O'Mahoney will get a hot punch tonight. His strategy calls for him to tire Lewis and then cut loose with his Irish whips.

Danno doesn't know as much wrestling as Lewis. The latter is a master of every mat hold. If O'Mahoney makes a single slip he will find his shoulders pinned to the canvas.

O'Mahoney will do well to keep alert, not to leave openings in his defense.

I look for a hard, bitter match. I like the Irishman to win, but I think the Strangler will win my odds with a couple of headlocks.

Each Jack Ryder will not test his area in competition until they have fully recovered from their pulled tendons, which have kept him idle for the whole of the outdoor training period.

Joe Kelley, a freshman, is the fastest. Eagle entered in the C. B. I. meet now. He stands a good chance to cap the freshmen dash events in the absence of Cady.

Hunt Out Tech Ace Quits Court

Gilbert Hunt, national indoor junior tennis champion, present M. I. Tennis captain, and New England intercollegiate tennis champion, will not participate in college tennis this year. It was announced this morning.

Hunt, who is considered one of the most promising of America's younger tennis players, since he is only 18 years of age, has decided that he would prefer to forego the college game this spring.

He did not return to college for the first term. Hence, if he played this spring he would have only one more year of varsity competition.

Ten Eyck In 34th Year As Coach

Syracuse N. Y., April 26.—Coach Jim Ten Eyck, beginning his 34th year of coaching, has 10 varsity and three freshman from last year's Syracuse University boat-ings.

The Jayvies won their event at Poughkeepsie last year, and the freshman secured second. The "old man" has the nucleus for two strong varsity crews, but is sticking to his custom of not making any pre-season predictions.

The Orangemen have been working out daily on Onondaga lake since early March. They open May 4 with a quadrangular race with Harvard, Cornell and M. I. T. on the Charles river. The other meet before the Bunker's regatta in June is an informal race with Cornell here, May 25.

The Syracuse varsity averages 177 pounds and has a height average of six feet. With the addition of Coxswain Ralston Weston of Chemung, Ralston Weston of Delhi is at stroke with Perival Jackson of Poughkeepsie at the bow.

The Jayvies average 150 in weight and reaches a height average of six feet. Captain Bailey O'Hearn of Hudson Falls strikes the Jayvies.

The freshman boats close to the Jayvies in physical composition.

ENGLAND Ready for TITLE GO

$40 TOP BAER-SCHMELING GO

By Associated Press
London, April 26.—There is no good reason to believe that Greater London, with an estimated population of more than 9,000,000, is not capable of absorbing a championship fight between Max Baer and Max Schmeling in August.

Walter Rothenburg, German promoter, has promised Baer about $300,000 to defend his crown here, and presumably would have to hand Schmeling another $100,000. To say that London doesn't have this kind of money to spend is eye-wash.

If one is to believe his eyes, there is more "hot money" being thrown around in London than in any other city in the world. The Associated Press has plans for the Baer-Schmeling bout, pointed out that he would have to defend 10,000 seats at $10 each to put him in the class of prize fighters. The remainder of Wembley's 80,000 or 90,000 seats he would price modestly, a third, a fourth or a fifth of the usual price.

Will Pay $40

Will London buy 10 chairs in quantity? One can only look at the record.

For the doubtful privilege of sitting on hard pine boards for several hours on end watching King George's Jubilee procession May 3 many more than 10,000 persons have paid more than $10 each. Prices for comic seats range up to twice that figure.

MATTY VS. DEAN CAN'T COMPARE 'EM

By Damon Runyon
(COPYRIGHT, 1935, BY UNIVERSAL SERVICE)
Washington, April 26.—This writer has been asked how he compares Jerome Dizzy Dean with Christy Mathewson, the usual choice of most baseball veterans as the all-time pitcher of the game.

It is very difficult to make this comparison now.

The question should be asked about seven years hence.

Dizzy Dean has been in the big league three years.

Mathewson—"The Mighty"—was a tremendous pitcher over a stretch of at least 10 years, through all of which he was the spearhead of the big town assault against some of the roughest, toughest baseball competition in history.

He was in the National League a total of 17 years.

COLLEAGUE

He was a "money pitcher," whose life has never been since, a "money pitcher" being a pitcher who can pitch in the crucial spots.

Mathewson was a Bucknell Collegian and a man of some culture. He was more intelligent than Dean.

He had none of Dean's amazing picturesque and color. None of his braggadocio, none of his love for the mob.

Mathewson was a shy, retiring chap, who would have shuddered at saying, or doing the things that the redoubtable Dean did. He was a quiet, unassuming fellow. He was the baseball idol of the New York crowd.

It was his great ability to throw on the mound that won him their admiration, not his personality. His "color" was his work. He was a superb artist dealing with opposing batters.

PUBLICITY

He was a big, bone-jointed, knock-kneed, blood-fellow, with a shambling gait. In the flower of his pitching career, he had such endurance that it seemed incredible he could dig so furiously.

Much of his fame was due, of course, to the fact that he was the star of the big town Giants in the days when the fiery McGraw presided the baseball land, a sort of hammered down, pudgy colossus.

There were more newspapers in New York in Mathewson's time than there are now, and they gave more attention to baseball.

Never less than ten writers and often more, with McGraw's call sounding the tom-toms on Mathewson. Small wonder that the world heard of him.

FOUR CLASSES

At Garfield Show

Another series of amateur boxing bouts will be held tonight under the auspices of the Garfield Athletic Association at the Waltham Arena, Nevers Beach.

Among those whose entries have been received are: Henry Garcia, New England, 118-pound champion; Al Pecore, Phil. Balafo, Al Ferando and many others.

There will be four classes this night: 115, 126, 135 and 147, all open.

Mrs. Sloane Trains Jumpers

By Associated Press
Apparently with the idea of dominating steeplechase racing as she did flat racing last year, Mrs. Dodge Sloan, owner of the Brookside Stable, is gathering together what appears to be a powerful and promising band of jumpers.

In contrast to many owners, who have turned old and broken down flat racers into steeplechase performers the last few years, Mrs. Sloan has taken several of her old standing thoroughbreds and turned them over to R. H. (Spec) Crawford to train over the fences.

The group includes Nainoa, Arthem, which performed admirably over the jumps last year, Tim Clock, winner of the 1934 Florida Derby; Caesar's Ghost, a ranking handicap horse; World Series, a three-year-old originally named for the Kentucky Derby; Anarchy, another fine three-year-old of last year, and Kapi.

The stable staff may have another great filly in Vale, who, by Sir Galsbad, III-Walke and carries 115 pounds in her initial start and stepped the five furlongs in 1:00.65.

An admirer which has played Balladier has now added in the stakes. A year ago she was rated the best of Black Tony's stand-out—on a par with J. E. Widener's Chance Sun.

SANTAN Top Choice IN 1ST

WILSON'S ACE IN 4TH

BEST—Young Native, 4th.

Havre de Grace, Md., April 26.—Young Native, Brookmeade's Kentucky Derby hope, appears to have all the best of the weight arrangements in the one mile and 70 yards of the fourth number here tomorrow afternoon.

FIRST RACE SANTAN, A. G. VANDERBILT ENTRY, DEFLATE

SANTAN, fifth in the Aberdeen Stakes, shapes up as the best in this was specified by A. G. VANDERBILT ENTRY OF WINTER SPORT and SPEED figure in offer the contest. DEFLATE impressed in his debut.

SECOND RACE RIVER ROSE, ARMY GAME, LUCKY TURN

RIVER ROSE was outmatched yesterday and that effort may be tossed into discard. In front of that the Brandon colts have a galloping winner over ARMY GAME. The latter again shapes up as the main danger. LUCKY TURN, a winner over older horses last time, is jumping up many pounds.

THIRD RACE DEADEYE DICK, NEWELL, MANTADOS

DEADEYE DICK was winner after being left at the post last trip. No telling just how good the Newells colts are in right now. NEWELL appeared short of work when he jumped to Mademoiselle last time. MANTADOS displayed a nice speed in a six furlongs dash only a few days back.

FOURTH RACE YOUNG NATIVE, BLOODROOT, TUTTICURIO

YOUNG NATIVE forced a better pace until well into the stretch in the Chesapeake Stakes last Saturday. Under the favorable impact of 104 pounds, the handsome son of Pompey figures to never leave the issue in doubt. BLOODROOT, fourth in the Chesapeake, is forced to give away many pounds on the scale to the top ones and hardly shapes up capable of turning the trick. TUTTICURIO turned in a clever effort in the Chesapeake and must be accorded some sort of a chance.

FIFTH RACE HEAD PLAY, ROLSTABOUT, DARK HOPE

Just have to stick along with HEAD PLAY, 124 pounds and all in the affair. The winner of the Juveniles and Bay Meadows handicaps on the coast, concluded a series of brilliant works with a handy seven furlongs in 1:27, the six furlongs in 1:13 and the half

MEN'S Doubles TONIGHT

20TH CENTURY SITE OF PLAY

By Ed Cogswell
Another jump in alleys takes place tonight and tomorrow in the National C and P pin tournament convening at the 20th Century Club for the men's doubles, in which Charles Heathcote and H. L. Dodge are the defending champions.

Judging by the big list of entries, this event has stirred up unusual interest.

Culling through the list are found the names of Frank McDonough and George Francis, both of Boston; C. Vines and B. Javine from Haverhill; William Richardson and Louis McNamee, Waverly; John Dooley and William Daly, Boston experts; Joe King and Stanley Currie from the Wintthrop.

Three other pairs that will be watched closely from their past records are Peter Palumbo and Roy Opie, Lynn; Ray Adams and Jack Adams, Weymouth; and Columbus and Arthur Noyes, top notchers from Milford.

WOMEN BOWL

A large delegation of Boston fans are taking the trip to Manchester, N. H., tonight to see the final 10 strings rolled in the 26-string match between Louise Hamilton and Lauretta Taitra. Hamilton is a pot of money as a waitress on the outcome of the event.

The Miss Hamilton goes into the contest tonight with a substantial lead of 77 pins, the backers of Miss Taitra have not lost confidence in her ability to overcome the odds when bowling on her home alleys.

Jackson team won the high honors in the Bunker Hill League over 12 other teams by a very comfortable margin. Kelly carried off the prize for the individual single with 151, and T. Buckley the three-string total with 371.

Bunker Hill captured the team single with 551 and the team three-string total went to the 400 with 1347. Noyes led all the bowlers in average by having the mark of 101. Noyes in the league holds its annual banquet.

DOGGERS

"Hot," Says Stengel

New York, April 26 (INS).—With his Dodgers still leading the National League today, the usually talkative manager Stengel is walking around like a sleepwalker. He acts like the hobo who found a thousand dollar bill and was afraid to try to change it for fear it might be a phony.

"They're hot right now," was all Casey would say, "and a hot club sometimes forgets to cool off. If my pitching holds up, we'll stay hot. For outside the belt we're a hundred per cent stronger than we were."

"Muzzle of Doom"

Boy Camper Faces Death With Assailant Fast Asleep

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

It is a well known belief, boys and girls, that the safest place a man can be in, is in bed. And I don't believe there is a record in all history where anybody has been killed by a dream.

But here is a yarn from Noble C. Hogg, of 219 McLean avenue, Yonkers, N. Y., that shows my theories about sleeping and dreaming all to pieces.

Noble was not only doggone near killed by a dream, but he had an adventure in the one place of all places that you'd ever expect to find an adventure—in bed.

Noble is a grown man now, but when this happened, 12 years ago, he was just a kid of 13.

He lived then, as now, in the city of Yonkers, and, while Yonkers still has a few lonely wooded sections left, 12 years ago it was much less built up than it is now.

In these days there were plenty of woods around the outskirts of the city, and Noble and his friends used to go out in them with air rifles and slingshots to hunt for small game.

One day, during school vacation, Noble and two of his pals decided that they'd like to go camping for a few days in a stretch of woods around what was then known as Perham's Lake—a pond which, in those days, was pretty popular as a swimming hole.

They had a bit of trouble getting their parents' permission, as they were pretty young to be going off all alone like that, but in the end they won out, got the permission and started.

The other two boys were named Leo and Jack. Leo and Noble took along their slingshots to pop squirrels with, but Jack sprung a surprise on the party. He brought along a .22-caliber rifle belonging to his big brother, which he had smuggled out of the house without his brother knowing it.

It was a dangerous weapon for a kid to be playing with, as they found out later. But at the moment they didn't think of that. All they were thinking of was the hunting and the number of squirrels they would be able to get with the rifle.

They got to the lake about evening and pitched their pup tent. It was too dark by this time to do any hunting, so they cooked and ate their supper and turned in. Jack lay on one side of the tent with the rifle beside him. Noble was on the other side and Leo slept between them.

Noble didn't sleep very well that night. The mosquitoes kept him awake. But the other two dropped right off and started snoring. Noble doesn't know how long he lay there awake, but suddenly he heard Jack whisper hoarsely, "There he is!"

Noble sat bolt upright. By the dim light of a lantern that hung, flickering on the tent pole, he saw Jack sit up, too. He came up with the rifle at his shoulder, the muzzle pointed toward the front of the tent.

There was some eerie quality in Jack's appearance that made the cold chills creep up and down Noble's spine. Who was he talking to out there? And why was he pointing that rifle toward the front opening of the canvas shelter?

Then, suddenly, Noble understood. Jack wasn't talking to anybody. He was pointing that rifle for no reason at all. Jack was talking, moving, acting in his sleep—and what a dreaming man might do with a rifle was something Noble didn't like to think of.

At that very moment Noble's worst fears came true. Slowly Jack swung the rifle around until it was pointed straight at him.

"Don't move," he said, and poked the muzzle of the gun within an inch of Noble's forehead.

Noble didn't move. He couldn't have stirred if he wanted to. He sat there petrified with fright, looking down into the tiny, vicious hole at the muzzle of the gun.

Way up behind the sights he could see Jack's eye, open and glittering. Jack's finger below, curling about the trigger.

Noble doesn't know how long he sat there, frozen with fear. That terrible, nerve-shaking suspense only ended when Jack muttered, "Missed him," in a disgusted tone, dropped the rifle and crawled back under the blankets.

For a moment Noble lay quiet, still too terrified to move. After a while he summoned enough courage to nudge Leo beside him. But Leo was awake, too—had seen the whole business—but, like Noble, he had been too scared to stir an inch.

Cautiously Leo reached over Jack and got the gun. Together they took it outside the tent and left it there. Then they went back to the tent, but they didn't sleep the rest of the night. They lay awake until dawn, fearful lest Jack get to sleep-walking and find that rifle.

And was Jack sorry for what he had done when they told him of it next morning? Not a bit of it. Jack refused to believe the story. He thought they were kidding him, and, although Noble hadn't seen Jack for several years now, for all he knows he still thinks he was being taken for a ride.

Well, sir, there is the story of the lad who had an adventure in bed—who was nearly killed by a dream.

Now, Pete, it's your turn to tell one. Send in the facts of that true adventure that I KNOW you have had. And I'll send you that check for 10 bucks that I KNOW you can use. And tomorrow I'll have a new yarn! It's "The Flaming Grave."

PEOPLE TO PROTEST HITLER'S APREST OF NUNS MONKS

DEMONSTRATION FROM ITALIAN RITES

Rome, April 27.—A Vatican protest against the new foreign exchange law in Germany banning religious and other publications was expected here today.

Chancellor Adolf Hitler promulgated the law, holding such publications hostile to the Reich.

Reports reached here early today of the wholesale seizure of religious workers, both men and women, accused of having violated the new law.

Reports were that Article V of the Papal Concordat had been broken by this new law and the church-state situation practically approached a crisis.

Not only was the Papacy expected to protest the attack on Catholicism but a protest was awaited from the archbishop of Milan and Lutheran pastors, three of whom were reported arrested.

Charges against Catholics were said to have been wholly on grounds of having violated the new law.

No Intent to Break New Exchange Law

The German (foreign exchange) law which German religious workers are accused of violating forbids the export of German currency from the Reich without permit from the government.

In defense of previously alleged violations, Catholic spokesmen have maintained that money sent out of Germany for mission or other religious purposes, and for the export of existing laws (which they said must still be proved), was done through religious aid and not with intent to violate government decrees.

Two Beaten Nearly to Death, Says Paper

By International News Service

London, April 27.—Two German Christian youths ejected from last night's Nordic pagan meeting in the Berlin sports arena were "nearly beaten to death," the Morning Post said today in a Berlin dispatch.

All London papers played heavily on the disturbance created by hecklers and the beating of those thrown out.

"Two young Christians," said the Daily Express, "were savagely attacked and brutally beaten by brown-shirted German pagans."

Paris Sees Possibility of an Allied Protest

Paris, April 27 (AP)—Reports from London that Germany had decided to build submarines opened up the possibility today of a new split among the pact of France, England and Italy.

Official quarters said the reports, if confirmed, would not be surprising as it would be the logical result of Germany's violation of the armistice clauses of the Versailles Treaty, and would be a direct result of the policy followed by Germany in enforcing accomplished facts, then negotiating.

$300,000 U. S. SUIT BY STATE

State Bank Commissioner Henry H. Pierce instituted suit in federal court today to recover $300,000 from the United States comptroller.

The suit, according to Pierce, was taken over by the comptroller in the administration of the affairs of the closed Federal National Bank.

Today's action in the aftermath of the $300,000 suit instituted some time ago against the closed bank. At the time of the first suit an agreement was reached whereby the $300,000 would be earmarked for payment in the event the suit was successful.

As a result of the agreement, Pierce said, the state and federal officers object to payments of dividends to depositors of the closed bank.

LIVERY STABLE Owner "Too Busy"

Chicago, April 27.—The horse phase of the city's still a livery stable in Chicago and there's still a law requiring status of this kind to be licensed.

It all came to light when Wesley Stickey was accused of not having a license. Judge Kasper continued the case when Stickey explained that since he took over the place he had no time to get a license.

$40,000 WHARF Fire in Portland

Portland, Me., April 27 (AP)—Fire today destroyed a large Central wharf building occupied by the Willard-Duggan firm, a wholesale market and storage plant, causing damage estimated at $40,000. Two firemen suffered slight injuries.

100 Routed By 5 Fires; 7 Overcome

Two two-alarm fires in Lynn and other blazes in Cambridge East Boston and Lowell drove nearly 100 persons from their homes and caused damage of $21,000 today.

Your firemen and two women were overcome by smoke in a blaze in Tudor street, Lynn, which caused $10,000 damage.

Another woman collapsed from smoke inhalation and was rescued by her brother in Lynn's other two alarm fire in Eastern avenue.

Dwelling houses in Cambridge and Lowell were swept by flames with 15 persons being forced to flee. The East Boston blaze victim, Mrs. Peter Dubby was freed with her brother when he safely escaped. He carried her to safety.

THREE IN HOSPITAL

Three firemen were taken to Lynn hospital suffering from smoke inhalation from the Lynn blaze. They are Captain Joseph Dougherty, Arthur Austin and George Murray.

John Pashow, a houseman, was also overcome, but returned to duty after first aid treatment.

Mrs. Evelyn Wheeler, carrying her four-month-old baby to safety, collapsed on a fire escape. First aid treatment revived her.

Mrs. Ray Atwood, 60, overcome by smoke, was revived in the office of a neighboring doctor.

Police said Mrs. Ida Maschuk, 64, in her second-floor apartment, saw flames through the window and aroused her family.

CURLEY PLANTS Arbor Day Trees

Arbor and Bud Day was officially celebrated by Governor Curley on the west lawn of the State House today.

Two American Linden trees were planted there by the governor, assisted by Fred H. Kimball, superintendent of state buildings.

Spurn Wage Cut

Adam, April 27.—About 500 employees of the four Adams mills of the Berkshire Pine Spinning Association, Inc., at a mass meeting here rejected a proposed reduction of wages.

CURLEY SPENDS $15,000

Only $15,000 of the $100,000 allotted the governor and council for extraordinary expenses actually had been spent up to April 20, Comptroller George E. Murphy informed Representative Philip G. Bowker of Brookline today.

Murphy pointed out that this compared with expenditures of $44,428 on April 20 last year.

Bowker called for the data on expenditures of the governor and council for lunches, costs of transportation to Washington and back, expenses of John P. Fenehy in the Holtzman matter proceedings and bills rendered by Richard D. Grant, secretary to the governor.

Governor Curley charged Bowker's action was an attempt to retaliate for his order for a state audit of the Brookline town books.

Bowker, who has demanded and only "froth" and that his concern was whether Curley was to be removed as Metropolitan District Commissioner and a person named by the governor to have a voice in the expenditure of $35,000.

The sum is the residue of $35,000 appropriated in 1928 and 1929 for metropolitan water improvements in the Ware river valley.

Comptroller Murphy revealed that Fenehy and Grant had not presented bills.

Lunch expenses for the governor and council to date are $688, he said, while six trips to Washington total $2,900.

CHALAPIN ILL; Arrives in France

Le Havre, France, April 27 (AP)—Fedor Chalapin, noted singer, was taken in a motor ambulance to a hotel upon his arrival here aboard the liner Park, suffering from an attack of grip.

He was under the care of a physician and had a fever of 102 degrees.

Chalapin was taken ill on the third day of a voyage from New York. He was accompanied by his wife.

POISON PIE Epidemic Ended

White Plains, N. Y., April 27 (US)—With only seven more persons added today to the list of those poisoned by the government-pastry, Westchester county authorities expressed the conviction the epidemic was at an end.

The total number of victims is 628. Officials believe, however, that more than that number have been exposed, possibly increasing the total to around 900.

HITLER U-BOAT PLANS ALARM EUROPE

By Associated Press

London, April 27.—Reports that Germany had started construction of a fleet of submarines in violation of the Versailles treaty—confirmed—was confirmed in London that Hitler already has begun laying down the keels of 12 small U-boats of 200 tons apiece, designed for home defense, preparatory to launching a more extensive construction program.

Although British officials were surprised at the admission in Berlin that U-boat construction was a part of Hitler's plans, especially since the matter was not broached during the talks between Sir John Simon and Hitler, no British move was expected immediately.

The full story will be placed before the cabinet, whose next regular meeting is Wednesday.

"There is no doubt," said one source close to the government, "that Germany has again broken a part of the Versailles treaty."

"It is an exact repetition of what he called Father, but he cannot be called Father in German politics."

Senator Bailey, concluding his speech, said too important in its possible effects to be ignored, used words that startled the audience.

"I will snatch the halo from his brow and throw it into the gutter," he said, and then threw the spittoon into the gutter.

The Senate expects that a formal reply to Senator Bailey will be made by some Senator who is a constituent of the Catholic, perhaps by Senator

They probably would. When a "white" in the North gets suddenly and violently rich he becomes a "high-white" and has no difficulty in getting waited on anywhere from Newport to Palm Beach.

Today's political news, important, and with dangerous possibilities, is the attack made by Senator Bailey of North Carolina upon a Catholic priest who broadcasts from Detroit, speeches on politics and social conditions.

No answer was made in the Senate yesterday to Senator Bailey's charge that the priest is the son and the grandson of a Protestant clergyman. Senator Bailey, saying he declined to refer to the broadcasting priest as "Father," added: "He can be called Father, but he cannot be called Father in American politics."

Went on death party

Merola, for 10 days under surveillance of postal agents, enjoyed a "death banquet" as guest of his slayers, police revealed.

He unwittingly accepted the invitation of three gangsters he believed to be his friends and went with them to roadhouse on the outskirts of Providence, officers said.

After the roadhouse party he was placed in the front seat of a car by two of the gangsters. Merola was slain in the car which transported him to the roadhouse and his body then transferred to the morgue in which it was found near Pearl Lake, officers asserted.

A man, whose name they declined to divulge, says the three gangsters remove Merola's body to their car at a point 10 miles from where it was found.

Proof that Merola had been striking heavily prior to his death was revealed by an autopsy performed yesterday.

Further investigation will be made to determine whether he had been placed in any of the liquor.

The gangsters who took Merola on the death ride were aware that they were committing a capital offense, officers declared.

Roosevelt to Unfold Jobs

Washington, April 27.—President Roosevelt's radio talk to the country tomorrow night will be a general review of administrative action on a number of matters, it was disclosed today.

Mr. Roosevelt is expected to deal with the federal work-relief program, new housing and public loan security measures, now before the Senate, and the National Industrial Corporation bill; the Banking bill, and the NRA. All save the work-relief bill now are pending. The President will go on the air at 11 p. m. (Daylight Saving Time).

FLEET AWAITS WAR GAME GUN

By International News Service

Abord U. S. S. Pennsylvania, San Pedro, Calif., April 27.—Tens of thousands of spectators today awaited the starting signal for its 1935 war games, the most significant and impressive in the history of the Pacific.

The main body of American men of war will steam out of San Pedro today morning and the maneuvers will be under way, affecting 183 ships and more than 400 air planes.

Before the fleet returns to its Pacific base, about 200,000 square miles of ocean will be traversed on a great triangle formed by Alaska, the Aleutian Islands and the Hawaiian Islands.

MILL HUNGER

MAYOR FIGHTS AT CAPITAL

With the specter of hunger menacing jobless Pequot mill employees and their families, Mayor George J. Bates of Salem today prepared to carry his fight to Washington to save the city's textile industry.

Salem ERA officials struggled frantically to find work for 2500 men and women, thrown out of work by the closing of the mills.

At present no relief appears possible for some 2000 of the jobless millhands and their families and the prospect of lack of food and money.

Mayor Bates, believing the mills will not reopen May 6, plans to appeal in Washington for immediate action.

He will confer with city officials and advisers today and plan a trip to the capital early next week.

While connected with the New England situation, Mayor Bates' appeal will be separate from the determined drive which representatives of the six states will open in Washington next week.

The menace of cheap foreign competition, the cotton processing tax and the wage differential are the three factors opposed by New England in the industry.

This has brought about a sharp split between North and South as the latter section holds practically opposite views.

Opposition to foreign competition would lose them their huge raw cotton market. They consider the wage differential fair because of cheaper living costs.

So today, while Northern interests were moving on Washington with committees and sub-committees, all eyes were turned toward Augusta, Ga.

There, the convention of the American Association of Cotton Manufacturers was expected to pass a resolution asking for the retention of the processing tax.

Since the association, composed chiefly of Southern mill owners, represents a block of legislative delegates fully as strong as anything the New Englanders can muster, the struggle loomed in huge proportions.

Congresswoman Edith Rogers of Massachusetts was optimistic she said that she believed that the convention would prove to be with the New Englanders "100 per cent."

Federal authorities will be asked to purchase New England's surplus textiles with work relief funds for distribution among welfare bureaus, CCC and other agencies.

John J. Smith, president of the North Shore Industries Protective Association, will present the plan to national authorities.

Boy, 3, Drives Off Trolley, Jumps Rails

By Associated Press
St. Paul, April 27.—The next time three-year-old Donald Harding wants to take a street car ride, he'll sit the motorman down the driveway.

Donald went shopping yesterday with his mother. He wandered out of a store, and spying an empty street car, clambered in.

Grasping the air brake handle, Donald released the brake and the car started down a hill. His mother, Mrs. E. C. Hines, missed him and walked out of the store just as the car moved.

In a futile attempt to pull the car from the car, the mother broke in a window, suffering severe cuts on her arm.

The ride ended a moment after the car had jumped the track, when the three-year-old boy, who rode the trolley onto the "cow catcher," broke a window and applied the brake.

The car, with doors open, had left standing by the motorman, while he went into a nearby business establishment.

Shoots 3 Onion Men

Laredo, Texas, April 27 (AP).—A man ran amok on the Clark onion plantation, three miles south of here today, killed one worker, was reported to have shot two others and fled still heavily armed.

What's to do about it? Sad little faces look through the closed gates of the Pequot Mills, in Salem—Wilfred Jalbert and his sister, Janet, are probably wondering if they will ever open again for their daddy. Hundreds of the closed mill employees are seeking work through the Salem ERA offices. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Mae Shakes Off Jitters

Hopes "Six Husbands" Won't Ask Alimony

Hollywood, April 27.—Mae West shook off her matrimonial jitters with wisecracks, and for the first time in a week met challenges to her spinsterhood with a grin.

The ardent actress that made her America's best-known "belle of the nineties," craved the towns she had flashed at those who doubted her denial of a marriage in 1911 to the Broadway actor, Frank Wallace, leading claimant to matrimony with the actress. Said Mae West:

"I've been counting back over the past week and find that I'm supposed to have married six guys, including two Frank Wallaces and Jim Timony, my manager."

STUDENT STRIKE ON RED TEACHINGS

By Universal Service
New York, April 27.—A "patriotic strike" by college students to force faculties to end communistic teachings was advocated by E. F. Hutton, chairman of the board of General Foods Corp.

Addressing the annual meeting of the Republican Club of the 15th administrative district, Hutton said:

"If we are going to have a strike let's have a real strike—a patriotic strike. Let's tell our boys and girls to go back to their schools and have them find out by themselves the communistic activities there."

"Then have them gang up, go to their faculties and say, 'Let's get rid of this communistic activity, and if there is any further talk of Communism here we'll leave our classes, close up your schools and colleges and go home to our parents, who will be glad to receive us.'"

After first giving President Roosevelt the co-operation to which he was entitled, Hutton declared business men are now beginning to have courage. He outlined the task they face as "to sell America back to Americans."

The speaker further asserted he would probably never cut another vote, because an individual has no chance of getting action from the people he puts in office as he representative.

Only organized groups, such as farmers, school teachers, the American Legion and the American Federation of Labor can get results, he declared.

JUDITH TOSSED IN LOVE BOUT

The lady who tossed her former husband, Gus Sonnenberg, for a matrimonial loss, now seems about to be thrown herself.

Judith Allen, the little Belmont girl whose romance with Jack Doyle, rival of Danno O'Donohue for Irish plaudits, filled the public prints only a brief few weeks ago, is about to be the victim.

And her opponent is no other than voluptuous Libby Holman Reynolds, tobacco heiress and Broadway "Moanin' Low" girl.

For Libby, an Broadway gossip puts it, has obtained a foothold on the fair Judith for the affections of Handsome Jack and is Judith's too true.

Libby last night appeared at a New York night club opening with the Irish boxer, who is also a singer of parts. Miss Holman is making her first Broadway appearance since the shooting of her husband, Smith Reynolds, in 1932, in a musical comedy.

Early this month Judith, whose name in the film since she became the ex-Mrs. Sonnenberg has been rapid, appeared in Providence on the arm of Handsome Jack.

At that time she said she wanted to present the Dublin heavyweight to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Elliott, at the Elliott home on Irving avenue. She said:

"He is the only decent man I have met in a long, long time." Of course, she was referring to Jack, who replied:

"She's the nicest girl in Hollywood."

Beautiful Voice
Doyle, said Judith, was going to retire from the ring and seriously go in for the vocal arts. She said:

"He is all through with boxing. He is going to be a singer. He has the most beautiful Irish voice I have ever heard."

Jack said all the other girls in Hollywood bored him. He had screen tests made with Marjorie Dietrich, Anna Stern, Carole Lombard and others.

"Even they were disappointing," he said, "all except Judith. Miss Allen he called 'My Little Girl' and 'Maureen'."

Now, it seems, even she bores him. For Libby Holman, Broadway says, has captured those Irish eyes that are smiling. And Judith has all the fury of a woman scorned.

So Broadway is watching—hoping things will happen.

Thar's Gold In That Thar Ashcan

By International News Service
New York, April 27.—Thar's gold not only in them there hills—but right in your own back yard!

This was the swan song of the annual convention of the American Chemical Society, which left New York slightly bewildered today.

"It's in the ash can," said the distinguished professor, making the directions of the back yard treasure hunt more specific.

"But don't bother," he added in effect. "Let the furnace man take the gold out and dump it in the sawdust. There's only 2 cents worth of gold in the average ash can and it isn't worth anybody's getting themselves dusty by digging it out."

The professor was Dr. V. M. Goldschmidt of the University of Goettingen, Germany, and his paper was read in absentia by Dr. H. Lowry, director of coal research at Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh.

About 16 of every 21 complaints investigated are found to be without foundation in fact, he said.

He said he wishes alimony-seeking wives and boarding house keepers would not try to learn the salaries paid to workers.

'Nude' Quins' Pictures Stir Dionne's Ire

By International News Service
Toronto, April 27.—Olivia Dionne, father of the quintuplets, and Leo Kervin, his manager, were in Toronto today, continuing their effort to have control of the five little girls handed back to the parents.

Kervin stated the parents would make no attempt to exploit the quintuplets if they regain control of them, and added Mr. and Mrs. Dionne would have two opportunities to sign contracts in the United States if management of the affairs of the children were in their own hands.

One of those he said, was a motion picture contract which would run for 10 weeks annually. He would not say what the other was, but he was accompanied by his brother, Leon, who would not talk.

Mr. and Mrs. Dionne are determined to obtain full control of the babies, and will not rest until they do so. Kervin said.

He praised the work of Dr. A. R. Delfor and the Red Cross in caring for the children, but complained about the showing of pictures of them in the media.

ELUCIDATE CLUES CLOUD HOLLYWOOD TRAGELY

POLICE QUIZ FIVE STARS; IVAR'S SECRETS UNCOVERED

By Universal Service

Hollywood, April 27—Anger that flamed into searing fury blazed in a quarrel over women, love and money as three men sat at a table draped with spotless linen and set with gleaming silver.

Suddenly, four shots splintered the luxurious, exotic atmosphere. Paul Wharton (Paul Ivar and many other names) effete Hollywood designer, fell, mortally wounded. William McCawley Howard, his chauffeur-companion, fled, smoking gun in hand. Two third man, believed to have been N. C. McDermitt, hesitated, then also fled.

Blood-matted still upon him, the slaver, hours later, lurked in shadows outside the home of Henry E. Rohr, police-inspector, who succeeded in slaying Howard.

At length, returning from a late party, Rohr appeared. Again Howard's sin spoke. Rohr fell, wounded and desperate. And now more a jet of fire sprang from the weapon. This time, Howard slumped, dead.

RECONSTRUCT CRIME
Thus, today, authorities reconstructed the slaying of Wharton in his six-room apartment on the Hollywood Park building. His slaying of Rohr, who was still reported near death, and the slaying of Howard.

The theory was strengthened when Rohr showed that the bullets which killed Wharton and Howard and killed Rohr came from Howard's gun.

Police refused to drop the woman and love angles in their investigation of the triple slaying. The names of several well-known women have cropped up mysteriously in the inquiry.

McDermitt, though by sheriff's officers for questioning in the slaying, reported for duty today on the U. S. S. Pennsylvania after an absence of several days. He is alleged to have fled Wharton's apartment after the shooting. Ship's officers immediately communicated with the sheriff's office and were asked to hold McDermitt until Captain Stenland could question him.

TALKS OF THREAT
Because Wharton's paralyzed mother, who lay helplessly in a hospital, was the 22-year-old dressmaker was killed, declared that a society matron, once named by Wharton as his partner in a love affair, had made threats against him, deputy sheriffs questioned her.

The glamorous Countess Rita de Liguoro, Italian film star and concert pianist, figured briefly in the investigation when a telegram addressed to her was found in Wharton's apartment. However, the pianist was exonerated by the investigators' satisfaction and the countess was declared completely exonerated.

Under his true name of Ivandro Morandini, Ivar was convicted February 2, 1934, of grand theft in the value of a $1200 diamond ring owned by Mrs. Ray Wolfe, Beverly Hills society matron. He was probation, however, and thus was not imprisoned.

Records showed Ivar then told officer Mrs. Wolfe once threatened his life because he refused to marry her.

Captain William Bright, head of the sheriff's homicide squad, said Howard, after killing Ivar, went to the home of Rohr, shot him, and then ended his own life.

"They were strange men, who in strange lives," said Bright. "As a matter, we haven't any definite facts."

Aileen Pringle, film actress, told police Ivar had been occasionally appeared at his home—even though he knew Ivar would admit him with curiosity, feminine-looking man.

The names of Constance Bennett, Jean Harlow, Carmen Pantages Cavendish and Evangeline Anne McPherson were included.

4 DOCTORS SUSPENDED FOR 'MISCONDUCT'

On charges of "gross misconduct" four Boston physicians have been suspended from the practice of medicine during the last few months.

Dr. Stephen Rushmore, secretary of the State Board of Registry in Medicine, disclosed this fact today.

They are Dr. O. C. Heston, 1700 North Street, Roxbury, suspended for three months on November 11, 1934; Dr. Julius Lewis, 1010 North Street, Dorchester, suspended for two months on February 1, 1935; Dr. Joel Ginsberg, Washington Street, Dorchester, suspended for one month on March 1, 1935; and Dr. Ely Silverman, 100 North Street, Dorchester, suspended for three months on March 1, 1935.

The suspensions were made by the State Board of Registration in Medicine on complaint of Dr. J. J. McPherson, chairman of the Committee on Professional Conduct, 100 State Street.

The committee is investigating other physicians on charges that they have misrepresented facts in reporting accident cases.

The committee is determined to determine whether the doctors under scrutiny have practiced collusion in order to obtain money for persons who actually were never injured in accidents.

CHECKS FOUND
Captain Stenland said it was the only writing on a sheet of hotel stationery and so badly composed that he believed Ivar either was writing it when the first shot was fired, or after the designer had been fatally wounded.

The discovery of two checks in the clothing of William Howard established the connection between the dead chauffeur and the critically wounded law professor. They were for $10 and $50, made payable to Julie and signed by Howard.

The probation officer said "On the records of our office are debts against Ivar totaling $200. There are in addition to other personal debts which may not have been called to our attention. Among the items listed are several hundred dollars for perfumes, $200 in Italian bills, and numerous other items."

A mysterious life's mysterious end! Here is the man who called himself Paul Ivar lying dead on the floor of his Hollywood apartment. In their effort to find a motive for the alleged murder, police are uncovering weird chapters in the victim's career. As a dress designer for movie colony celebrities, including glamorous Jean Harlow, Ivar had contacts with many famous beauties. Aileen Pringle, screen actress, says he purchased—and charged to her account—hundreds of dollars' worth of perfumes and cosmetics, for his personal use. The picture of the death scene, above, is from International News Photograph Service via RCA Radio from Hollywood to New York.

BANK CLERK MISSING

That an automobile registered to Charles H. Christian, 22, of the bank about a year ago, was found in a parking place by two women last Wednesday afternoon.

Smith told the police Christian was the bank's treasurer of the bank. In leaving he asked Alfred F. Davis, an assistant manager, if he could take the car for a short time.

Christian, member of a family of 11 children, had been employed at the bank about a year.

Smith said the bank was fully protected. The police of Hartford, Conn., today reported to local authorities

Democrats Gather in N. Y. Tonight

Counsel for Irving and Murton Miller and Alva Fisher will leave for Washington tonight to petition for a writ of certiorari in Supreme Court.

They expect to be back in Boston by noon Wednesday to confer with Governor Curley regarding further steps for the condemned men.

The lawyers William McPherson and George Stanley Harlow, conferred with Warden James L. Hoggart at state prison today.

DEATH HOUSE TRANSFER
As a result, Hoggart later admitted, he was completing arrangements to transfer the trio from the death house to the Cherry Hill section.

Three adjoining cells over the office have been prepared. Wooden sheathing has been placed about the cells and the doors covered with wire mesh.

The petition will be heard by a single justice in Washington. Should he refuse, the last resort would be executive clemency of Governor Curley.

LAWYERS CONFIDENT
Both attorneys, however, are confident it will be referred to the full bench for review. This would ensure the condemned men of several more months of life.

Harlow denied today that he is acting for Henry Pringle Miller, Murton's wife. In the latter reported move to obtain freedom on parole from Dedham Jail, he said:

"Norma's lawyer is George A. Douglas. He will act for her. There were anything for a lawyer to do. Her parole, however, is a matter which is in the hands of the parole board and county authorities. There is no legal problem."

START ON JOBS BIDS ORDERED BY TICKES

By Associated Press
Washington, April 27.—Taking the first step toward starting actual expenditure of the 400-million-dollar work fund, Secretary Weeks today telegraphed FWA state engineers to resume receiving applications for non-federal projects.

Meanwhile, informed sources linked Morris Llewellyn Cooke of Philadelphia with the post of director of the $100,000,000 rural electrification program in the new works setup.

It was said that Cooke, vice-chairman of the national power policy committee, has been called to the White House for a conference on this program. He also has been closely associated with Secretary Weeks, one of the three leaders designated by the President.

DON'T LIST SPEEDED
No work applications had been accepted since February 28, 1934, when there were $200,000,000 in projects already submitted, for which no funds were available.

Ticks' action coincided with hurried preparations by Harry L. Hopkins, director of the works program division, to prepare a list of employable persons on relief throughout the country.

FWA will send 150 engineers, attorneys and financial examiners to state engineers with state engineers' preliminary examination of projects.

CCC TO RECRUIT IN JUNE
Meanwhile, officials of the Civilian Conservation Corps announced state quotas for bringing that organization up to a strength of 600,000 men. Enrollment will begin June 1 and is expected to be completed by August 31.

Determination of regional wage scales for relief workers was reported elsewhere to be virtually completed. An authoritative source has indicated that they will range from as much as $100 a month for some types of work in the large cities to as low as $20 a month for some of the workers in the South, where living costs were described as being low.

The average work relief wage this official said, will be around $50 a month.

Following are New England and New York state civilian conservation corps quotas, the first estimate of figures giving the present authorized enrollment:

Connecticut	 2110	6600
Maine	 1717	2100
Massachusetts	 10618	13000
New Hampshire	 1145	1700
New York	 33485	82000

New York, April 27.—The New York Post says Father Charles E. Coughlin will organize the New York unit of his National League for Social Justice within a month at a mass meeting in Madison Square Garden, or the Garden at Bow in Long Island City.

The newspaper says Father Coughlin intimated as much to a representative of paper who attended the recent mass meeting in Detroit, in which the Michigan unit was organized.

"At the New York meeting," the Post said, "there will be less oratory and more organization." The date for the meeting will not be set until Fr. Coughlin decides whether it will be held in the Garden, which seats 22,000 persons, or the Bowl, which has a capacity of 70,000.

SILVER PRICE AT 77.57

Washington, April 27 (AP).—Official notice that there would be no announcement over the week-end of a change in the price of silver paid by the country was given today by Secretary Morgenthau.

Senator McCarran (D. Nev.), the congressional silver bloc, arranged a conference with Secretary Morgenthau for today, perhaps to urge his proposal that the Treasury boost its price at once from 77.37 cents an ounce to $1.28, the statutory coinage value.

A group of silver speculators said the Treasury would go on buying silver until its price attained $1.28 or until the government's stocks equaled one-third the gold stock for the Treasury by Congress.

Senator McCarran said an announcement of an immediate boost in $1.28 would "stop foreign speculation and take the metal off the market as a commodity."

Senator King (D. Utah) said he would like to see the "silver speculators" by "ceasing to buy for a little while or giving an indication that the speculation was not warranted."

While senators from silver regions rapt in mounting prices, something like a great boom from China, Dr. Alfred So, Chinese minister, has complained that rising silver prices aggravate deflation in his country, which is on a silver standard.

Mexico Calls in Silver Coin for Paper Notes

By Associated Press
Mexico, D. F., April 27.—With exports of silver coins forbidden, the government today began enforcing a transformed monetary system to prevent silver currency being sold abroad for commercial uses and to maintain a favorable international exchange rate.

The price rise curbed the value of the Mexican peso to the point where it would have been profitable to melt silver coins and market them for commercial purposes.

President Cardenas ordered the surrender of all silver coins to the Bank of Mexico in exchange for paper certificates.

British People Gather Up Old Silver to Sell

By Associated Press
London, April 27.—American banks were ordered today to have been large buyers of silver in a boom here which assumed such proportions that conservative market quarters describe it as "wild speculation," since President Roosevelt's announcement of a price increase.

A further sensational jump in the price of the white metal was expected in a number of quarters, which believe speculators will push up the London price in the belief that the United States treasury will follow.

Householders began looking up old silver plate and trophies to sell on the rising market.

He has offered an amendment to the Soldiers Bonus Bill to authorize President Roosevelt to compromise the war debt and use the proceeds to pay off the bonus in full.

With his amendment already in the Senate, awaiting consideration of the Harrison bonus compromise, Gore sought support in administration and senatorial circles. The amendment was beaten in the Senate finance committee by a narrow margin.

L. A. Mayberry Disbarred; Court Flays Jury Bribing

Attorney Lowell A. Mayberry was ordered disbarred today by Justice Henry T. Lummus of the Supreme Court. Basis for the disbarment were charges of jury-fixing.

The charges were brought by Dunbar F. Carpenter, appointed by the Supreme Court to investigate fraudulent practices among attorneys.

Attorney Mayberry was born in Waltham May 26, 1890, and attended Waltham schools and Phillips Andover Academy.

He was graduated from Boston University Law School in 1912 and was admitted to the bar the same year, beginning the practice of law as an associate of his father.

In making his finding Justice Lummus said:

"I order that judgment be entered pronouncing the respondent from the office of attorney at law."

SAYS JURORS BRIBED

Discussing the evidence of alleged jury-fixing in his finding, Judge Lummus said in part:

"I draw the inference from the evidence and subsidiary facts as a whole that the respondent is guilty of bribing or attempting to bribe through his agent or agents a juror in each of the said cases."

"I also draw the inference that the respondent conspired with John J. Donnelly to bribe a juror or jurors in the Blanchard-Pelcher case, the Wilcox case and the Dwyer case."

"No one concerned in said cases had an interest in the success of the respondent in more than one of them, except the respondent himself."

Disbarment proceedings were instituted against Mayberry in 1933. Justice Lummus heard the proceedings and dismissed the petition finding no basis for disbarment or disciplinary action.

Last December Justice Lummus rescinded this finding and ordered a retrial.

Donnelly was convicted of jury-fixing last June. He is now serving 8 to 10 years in Norfolk prison.

CURLEY ORDERS BROOKLINE AUDIT

The first state-conducted audit of Brookline's accounts was being prepared today on orders from the governor's office.

The probe order followed a challenge to the governor by Representative Philip G. Bowker, former Brookline selectman.

Bowker asked the state comptroller's office details of certain expenses incurred by the governor which Bowker said might be "extra curricula."

Included in Bowker's requests were costs of Parker House luncheons for council members during the Hallinan trial and for the cost of suites taken by Attorneys Freney and Mullin during their prosecution.

Traveling expenses between here and Washington were also to be investigated Bowker said, as well as any extra payments made to his governor's secretary, Richard D. Grant.

When he learned of the move, Governor Curley said:

"I have noticed that in those towns where the Democrats are in control, there is always a state audit of the accounts of the expense of the municipality."

"On the other hand there are a number of communities where liberal officials have committed suicide when an audit has been ordered."

"There have been strange conditions existing. I believe it would be in the interests of the state and the inhabitants of Brookline to submit their accounts for a state check."

Routing an Elderly Charmer

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband and I and our four children led an ideal family life, which is now wrecked by the eternal triangle.

The local superintendent of schools, who is an old friend of ours, asked me to take under our roof a school teacher who had been recently divorced. As she was ten years older than my husband, and I had the traditional respect for school teachers, I did not hesitate to receive her in the family as a paying guest. This woman is almost 70 years of age, and her entire life seems to be fixated on her sex. She is not pretty, nor is she cultivated or amiable, but she is a very good housekeeper. I do not know whether to go to the local superintendent of schools and tell him of my discovery or not.

My husband, who is 37 years of age, says if she leaves he will leave with her. I have my children to consider, and the case is very puzzling.

UNHAPPY.
You might let your thoroughly infuriated husband if he were to leave home on account of this affair, that her position in the local school system would not be long, and I judge that she needs the job more than she does the admiration of a married man who probably would not have much to give her after he had provided for his minor children. And this the law will insist upon, though it's a breach-of-promises suit.

Should the elderly charmer be still under your roof, you will be with in your rights if you tell her to leave. After all, need have no fear that your husband would go with her. But the law is to desire that open scandal.

IS SHE REALLY CAPABLE OF LOVE?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

There's something strange about this girl I'm in love with. I'm fourteen years older than she is, but she has always assured me that makes no difference. In our tender moments, when I answer "I like you more than anyone else in the world," she will answer: "I love you, and I know you wouldn't want to tell me that if I didn't mean it."

These declarations have gone on for such a long time that it begins to appear to me that she is either kidding me or that she is sincere. I have never made up my mind as to which it is. Some nature, I think, though I still love her deeply.

ADAM'S DISAPPOINTMENT.
You can't have very much faith in this girl if you think she is carrying on an affair with another man. After she has told you she likes you better than anyone else in the world, some nature is incapable of very deep emotion. They never love, they only love in understood by those of more ardent temperaments.

For should certainly consider well in advance if this type of affair in a wife would be sufficient for you.

WANTS BRAINS THIS TIME.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm trying to start all over again at the age of 28, after a life wrecked by my own credibly unfortunate marriage. I want to start over again, but I must find a girl who is willing to consider that. This time the girl I choose must have brains, and I want a college girl who may or may not be a widow. I have two college degrees and am an engineer.

LOST HALP.

This column, as you know, is not a matrimonial go-between, but it does give introductions among its correspondents. And, the best way to make acquaintances is through friends, and they are unlikely to introduce you to the wrong sort.

It is an excellent Engineers' Club in the city from which you write me. You join that, doubtless, and your members will introduce you to some of their friends and relatives. In these days, however, all sorts of social activities are being given. Political clubs take social affairs into consideration, and you may find a college degree should have no difficulty in meeting the right type of girl.

AND NOW HE HAS MOVED AWAY.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I went with a boy the same age as I am, and we got into a fight together. Then his parents moved to another town, and he left terribly about being separated. When he came to see me, he had a little argument, and after he went home I wrote to him but he didn't answer me. I think a lot of this boy, and I don't know what to do about it. Shall I write him again?

DISAPPOINTED.

Write him a jolly little letter and tell him not to grow down. Don't renew your argument. Just a pleasant friendly letter, please. And tell him you are looking forward to seeing him again.

Are Men Blind to Fashion?

It all depends. Many men consider it beneath them to notice women's clothes. Others pride themselves on being observant and on their excellent taste. Some people say that women dress for women, others that their best efforts are made on men's behalf. What do you think?

EXPEDITION ARRIVES AT GLADE

CHAPTER 330

AT MY father's command to make haste in getting the blankets, pillows and empty suitcases which Hank had suggested as camouflage for the Chinese whom we expected to bring back with us from the woodland glade, the boy wheeled so quickly that he stumbled and fell flat on his face.

"Oh!" I exclaimed. "Did—"

But my father's hand tightened warningly upon mine, and I left the query as to the lad's possible injury unasked.

The next instant Hank was up again and running toward the other car, and I was glad that I had not added to the chagrin which had sent the other car to the back of his neck, by asking if he had hurt himself.

He dashed up to the other car and muttered a few hasty words to Hank. Hank and Bob tumbled out and raced with him to the house.

They must have found Lillian immediately, for they were back with their booty in such record-breaking time as she only could engineer.

At a quiet word from my father Otto climbed down, leaving his engine running, threw open the door, and then looked with dismay at the load of things the boys were carrying.

THE EXPEDITION STARTS
"All those things can never go with your motor," said my father, once out of his machine-like demeanor. "Where will you put them?"

"That is a problem for you to figure out," my father said nonchalantly, but with a touch of firmness. "They must be carried in here, and my daughter and I will rest our feet on top of them, can we arrange that, I am sure."

Otto looked extremely dubious, but he was too well trained and obedient to make any further protest.

He fell to work immediately, and to such good purpose that in two minutes the empty suitcases, blankets and pillows were piled so compactly in the wide space in front of us that we had plenty of room for our feet.

The four boys who eagerly and unobtrusively had stood by the car handing the things to Otto, turned and gazed at their respective places as soon as the last article had been stowed. Hank climbed to the seat beside Otto and the others took their places in the other car, which we had commandeered from the Chinese.

My father then gave Otto the signal to go ahead and we swept out of the driveway, closely followed by the lighter car.

My father had told Otto not to speed, because he wished to do nothing that would attract attention on the road. But the distance was so short that, despite the moderate pace, we were there in what seemed to be an incredibly short time.

LAST INSTRUCTIONS
Hank spoke to Otto when we were within a few rods of the opening to the winding road, and the chauffeur drew his car to the side of the road.

The other car went past us without stopping and turned into the opening, but we saw that Bob was kneeling on the grass seat looking out of the rear window, and that Ronald, seated beside Bill, was keeping a similar lookout ahead.

My father turned his head and gave a quick look at the road behind. "Not a car in sight, nor anything else," he said. "Any delay the right thing in driving right in. But before we try it, we must know how far in the others are."

"Ask Mr. Henry to come back here a minute," he said, and in a trice Hank was out of the front door and was opening the rear door and was opening the rear door.

"We'll wait here while you go and make a report," he said. "Tell the boys to get the car turned around facing this way before they start looking for the Chinese. Don't show either yourselves or the car in the open space. Divide your party, two going one way, and two the other, through the underbrush, clearing the glade until you come upon the place where the men are bound."

"If everything is all right, send your footman back here. Then we'll drive in, and Otto can go down and help you get the Chinese into the car. You'll need all the muscle available. That's all. I don't think I need tell you to hurry."

MRS. CULBERTSON ON NOTRUMP HANDS

Balance Needed for Notrump

By MRS. CULBERTSON

As a rule unbalanced hands should not be played in notrump.

A balanced hand is one which does not contain a singleton.

Occasionally, you may find that you can make a game in notrump even with unbalanced distribution, but usually it will be because either you or your partner holds a long strong suit, and then look with dismay at the lead of things the boys were carrying.

I promised yesterday, when I was so mean as to call attention to one of my husband's errors in the match with the Simms and the Culbertsons, that today I would recount one of Mr. Sims' mistakes.

The hand I have chosen is one in which Mr. Sims, in spite of the fact that both he and his partner had extremely unbalanced hands, chose to play the hand for three notrump.

Mr. Culbertson's hand was: ♠ 10 8 7 6 5 4 3 2, ♥ 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2, ♦ 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2, ♣ 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2.

Mr. Sims' hand was: ♠ 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2, ♥ 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2, ♦ 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2, ♣ 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2.

There are so many delicious ways of preparing rice pudding that it is difficult to restrain myself to one, with suggestions for variations. But in answer to a request here is the recipe:

2 eggs
1/2 cup raisins
1 tablespoon powdered sugar
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup milk

Separate the whites and the yolks of the eggs. Beat the yolks two tablespoons of the milk and place the rest of the milk on the heat in the upper part of the double boiler. With the raisins, add sugar and spread the rice in the milk.

Remove from the fire and pour the pudding into the serving dish which should be hot. Beat the whites of the eggs light and add to the pudding. Sprinkle with sugar. Bake for 10 to 12 minutes. Serve cold.

In place of raisins add sliced bananas, cooked apricots, dates, any cooked fruit.

Marian Martin Pattern Afternoon Frock

By MARIAN MARTIN

Inspired by the Print in hand, Marian Martin does an afternoon frock whose youthful simplicity is rivaled only by the naive charm of that popular pose itself.

No wonder it is seen in a thousand guises this season. The cool cape-sleeve falls with easy grace from the shoulders and the cleverly cut skirt panel rises high into the bodice, giving the bust a softly modeled line.

The unadorned neckline is a fitting accent for your youth! If you choose one of these popular day silk prints, wear a bunch of daisies on your hat—or a nosegay pinned at the waistline will be young and girly!

For solid color, a contrasting cape-sleeve is smart. Complete the look with a matching belt. Send for order form.

GOOD GRAY

How to Make it

By MARTHA LEE

"EXPLAIN PLEASE, how to make a good gravy from a roast," asks a mother, who is using less butter on the table these days, and depending on gravy with bread or biscuits to extend the meal.

Although it must be remembered that the vitamin in butter is one of the essentials of the diet, for children and adults.

To make brown gravy or pan gravy from a roast, pan fried meat or poultry, pour off all but four tablespoons of the fat. Then put the meat on a burner on top of the range. Add four tablespoons of flour and stir until browned but not burned, then one-half teaspoon of salt, one-fourth teaspoon of pepper and stir smoothly. Gradually add two cups of boiling water. Let the stirring all the time. Boil three minutes. Strain. Re-bake if necessary.

Serve with potatoes, rice, spaghetti.

A tip addition is to add one tablespoon minced onion; or add one tablespoon sour cream just before serving; for duck or chicken or goose gravy, add one-half cup of orange juice.

Part of the hot water; or use hot milk in place of the water for a delicious milk gravy; this is usually served with chicken; some cooks preferring part milk and part cream.

Oil FOR THE

By ALICE TIDWELL HOBART

SYNOPSIS

Stephen Chase, youthful and ambitious, is traveling over the red plains of Manchuria. He is a salesman for the gigantic American Oil Company, opening new markets in the primitive Far East. Stephen has been doing this work for two years, since he was graduated from an American college of mines and, as a result of the mild 1908 business depression, had taken the China job.

He and his native servant, Kin, with their mule cart, are slowly slogging from town to town as Stephen indulges his habitual daydreams of his sweetheart, the lovely Lucy, in far-off America. He calls on the Merchant Yang (the company wants a local native agent) and their negotiations get under way.

(This is a continuation of the Cosmopolitan production soon to be released by Warner Brothers.)

"Get water for a bath," he commanded. "But first give me the coffee."

He sat himself on the edge of the kang, drinking quickly, toward the end of his coffee. When Kin had placed near him a brass basin on its four-legged stand, Stephen motioned him away. "No, I don't want you Kin. There are no no-no's in this affair. Shut the door as you go out."

Swiftly he finished undressing and dipped his sponge into the hot water. Lifting it, dripping, he scrubbed his chest, his arms, his legs, taking delight in the freshness of the skin.

For several days he had had to sleep in the common room of the inn; there had been no small inner apartment where he could bathe.

The hot steaming dishes of food began to appear. Yang arose and, with his chopsticks, lifted a choice bit of meat, placing it in the sauce he had prepared, then a small pepper teaspoon. One leaned over his shoulder, filling the thick-steamed porcelain bowl at his place with warm kiaoing wine.

It was not until mid-afternoon that the first of the food appeared. The food was served—the individual bowls were served—the customary cup of tea was served. But even this brought no release. Pats of fresh wine were set on the table, the cups were filled, and Stephen realized that the men were settling down and settling down.
